Mail Inquiry Told Howes Held Session Of Operators

Black Probers Delve for First Time Into Present Set-up.

Temporary Awards Scheduled Today

Postoffice Aid Says His Conference of Lines Justified.

By Felix Bruner.

The Senate air-mail investigation turned yesterday for the first time to the conduct of the present Administration in handling of air-mail contracts.

The committee heard details of a meeting of all mail contractors at the office of W. W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General, last August at which the operators discussed with postoffice officials the curtailing of service made necessary by a reduced budget.

Meanwhile, the Postoffice Department announced receipt of 45 envelopes containing bids for new mail contracts on a three months' basis. The bids will be opened today and the contracts awarded within 30 days.

The meeting at which decisions on mail service curtailment was reached resembled in several respects the famous meeting called by former Postmaster General Brown during the Hoover Administration when mail routes were allotted.

This time the operators agreed upon the routes to be cut off and the schedules to be reduced. It was determined at that time how much money should be received by each company out of the curtailed budget.

Howes Justifies Meeting.

Howes, who told the committee of the meeting, declared he believed a conference with operators was justified and that calling them in and obtaining their advice before changing schedules and routes and in effect realloting money paid for carrying the mail was "the only decent thing to do."

Questioned by Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, Howes told the committee that the department had found it necessary to cut the funds paid to contractors by about 25 per cent. He said contractors were asked to submit plans, but the one adopted was virtually proposed by the department itself. There was no voting and no formal agreement at the meeting, he testified.

Howes told of difficulties in arriving at an agreement with the Budget Bureau on appropriations. He said the matter was submitted to President Roosevelt and that Mr.

3 Thugs Shot By Policeman

Massachusetts Seeks Six, One Believed Kidnap Case Victim.

Weston, Mass., April 19 (AP).—A bullet-pierced bandit car, with one of its six occupants a probable kidnap victim and three more bearing bullet wounds inflicted by a lone policeman in a furious pistol fight, was being hunted throughout the Eastern States today.

With only three pools of blood, more than 30 empty cartridge shells and a description of the car for clues, State police, cooperating with Weston authorities, started a hunt throughout Massachusetts and sent a description of the automobile to police throughout this and nearby States.

Motorcycle Officer Albert Raynor stopped the car early today for speeding. The driver attempted to overturn Raynor's motorcycle and, this failing, three of the occupants of the car leaped out and opened fire on the policeman.

Raynor jumped behind a stone wall, and as the gunmen blazed away at the wall, fired several shots, three of which took effect in as many gunmen. Two companions, who had been guarding the sixth man—manacled and his head swathed in a heavy towel—assisted their wounded comrades into the car and sped away.

Police officials expressed the belief that Raynor had interrupted either a kidnaping or the taking of a gangster "for a ride."

Veterans, Fighting Cuts, Threaten Riot in Paris

Paris, April 19 (AP).—A riot of war veterans threatened tonight when several thousand men paraded through the heart of Paris.

D. A. R. Elects 7 Vice Presidents Of 11 in Field

Roper Talks on Recovery; Cummings Pleads for Crime Curb.

Seven women were elected last night as vice presidents general of the D. A. R. as the forty-third Continental Congress heard two Cabinet officers appeal for the organization's support to aid the Nation against internal foes.

While Secretary of Commerce Roper was urging the group to support the recovery program, and Attorney General Cummings asked backing for his twelve-point plan to curb crime, the seven successful candidates were already jubilant over their victory.

Election results were announced at the opening of the Constitution Hall session, before the Cabinet officers made their pleas.

The successful candidates were:

Mrs. Bessie Carroll Higgins, Iowa; Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, Indiana; Miss Minnie M. Dilley, Minnesota; Mrs. Julian Benson McCurry, Georgia; Mrs. Henry Zoller, jr., Mayland; Mrs. Frederick F. Gundum, California, and Mrs. William P. H. McFaddin, of Texas.

There were 11 women nominated for the posts. The defeated candidates were Mrs. Sydney Cooper, North Carolina; Mrs. Frank J. Bowman, Illinois; Mrs. John Y. Richardson, Oregon, and Mrs. Zebulon Judd, Alabama.

Mrs. Charles W. Bryan, Tennessee, was elected to the single vacant post of honorary vice president general. She is a daughter of Raphael Semmes, famous Confederate naval commander.

Queen Crowned, Throngs Curtsy At Cherry Fete

With beauty, daring and pomp blended into a day of thrilling interest, Washington yesterday put on a real show—the first day of the first Cherry Blossom Festival.

Thousands of visitors and Washingtonians attended three events which provided a smashing opening to the festival.

With the cherry blossoms in fullest bloom thousands were drawn to the sunrise service, the afternon coronation and horse show and last night's official lighting ceremony.

Lighting of the trees on the Tidal Basin climaxed a full day which had seen Miss Eleanor Roosevelt crowned queen of the festival.

As the crown of blossoms was placed upon the blonde locks of the fair debutante daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, the festival was in full swing.

Although cloudy skies held more than a promise of rain, nearly 12,000 persons were on hand to see Miss Roosevelt receive her crown from the hands of the Rev. George F. Dudley.

But there was no rain to mar the event nor to spoil the costumes of the queen and her attendants: Alicia Rogers, Valeria Prochnik, Eliza Mitchell, Anne Eustis, Teenie Eckengren, Elizabeth Walker, Mary Preston Gibson, Gertrude Laughrin, Isabel Voorhees, Suzanne Hill.

Lexingtonians Flay New Deal As Liberty Foe

Delegation From Cradle of Freedom Scores Abuse of Personal Rights.

From Lexington, Mass., where 159 years ago a shot was fired that was heard around the world, came yesterday a delegation to protest to Congress against curtailment of personal liberty.

Led by Robert Holt, town moderator, a band of eight Lexingtonians presented to Congress a "declaration" protesting "unreasonable interference" by the Federal Government "in the affairs of a free people."

It was signed by 1,200, or more than 10 per cent of Lexington's citizens.

Public Waste Scored.

"We protest against Federal interference in business under the guise of promoting social reform and economic activity," it said.

"We protest against the indefinite extension of legislation originally designed solely for emergency purposes.

"We protest against the passage of legislation without more careful consideration by Congress.

"We protest against the increase of bureaus, boards and commissions and the delegation of arbitrary powers to such Governmental agencies.

"We protest extravagant and wasteful expenditure of public funds on unneeded and unproductive projects, thereby creating a constantly mounting National debt."

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers offered the declaration to the House and added a few words of her own.

Mrs. Rogers Talks.

"One hundred and fifty-nine years ago today," she said, "the shot was fired which was heard round the world at Lexington, Mass. Ten of its citizens died in their fight for liberty.

"Today a delegation of eight citizens of the same town have journeyed to Washington to again fight for liberty.

"They bring a demand, signed by 1,200 Lexington citizens, reviving an historical practice, because when a free people they choose duly-elected representatives, and invest them with responsibility for preserving their Constitutional rights to own property and to exercise freedom of individual enterprise."

Other Republican Representatives, including James W. Wadsworth, who is credited with aspiring to the 1936 Presidential nomination, uttered similar sentiments. Back in Lexington, a kindred ceremony took place when the words of the Declaration were read on the green, before the tomb of the Minute Men.

Museum Bans Hitler Cartoon; Nazi Opposition Is Blamed

New York, April 19 (AP).—A caricature of Adolf Hitler was taken from the exhibit of unemployed artists at the Metropolitan Museum at instigation of Museum officials, it was learned today.

"Organized opposition" on the part of Hitler adherents here was responsible, it was charged by the art department of the Adult Education Classes, sponsors of the show.

Coming on the heels of the rejection in Washington by Navy officers of "The Fleet's In," a painting depicting sailors on shore leave, the Hitler episode had artists fuming anew about censorship.

With the Hitler caricature, there were also removed caricatures of Charles G. Dawes and Senator William E. Borah. William C. Monahan, of the Adult Education staff, said, however, that museum attaches had told him of organized opposition to the Hitler piece.

This caricature, called "His Best Foot," shows the Nazi dictator, clad only in a pair of shorts, balancing on a flaming sword. One foot, thrust forward, is clad in a shoe and sock; the rear foot is a cloven hoof.

The artist is Caspar Emerson, jr., 19. He is the son of a New York newspaper cartoonist, Monahan said.

A statement that only "good taste" was responsible for the removal of the caricature was made by William M. Ivins, jr., acting director of the museum. The same explanation was given for the removal of the Dawes and Borah pictures.

Monahan, the young man's teacher, differed. "We were told there were many complaints about the Hitler cartoon," he said. "It is such an excellent piece of work and so original it seems unfair to punish a student who shows so much genius."

Guns of Gang Drive Janitor To Yield Keys

Wounded Outlaw and 3 Pals Take $27,629 and Get Away.

Bandit's Father Annoys Police by Revealing Family Reunion.

Pana, Ill., April 19 (AP).—John Dillinger, with his wounded leg, and three assistant bandits were credited today with a smoothly conducted raid on the Pana National Bank that netted $27,629.

The job bore the trade-mark of experts, and the limping leader, if one witness who watched the getaway saw right, was none other than the hunted Dillinger, whose wounded leg has given his hunters another mark of identification to shoot at.

The robbers took the keys to the bank from the janitor, entered before banking hours and politely forced the employes to open the vault, using pistols for argument.

Roads Guarded in Vain.

They got away with speed enough to foil pursuit and disappeared in typical Dillinger style. Central and southern Illinois highways were patrolled without success. Reports that Dillinger and his gang were marauding in southern Illinois had put sheriffs on their guard last night, but a quartet of robbers, perhaps the bank robbers, today took $40 from a drug store at Odin without interference.

That young John had a game leg was confirmed by John Dillinger, sr., at the family home in Mooresville, Ind., where he annoyed city and State police with the admission that they had had a reunion in the old home recently while everybody from the Attorney General of the United States down to the Squibbs Corners constable was keeping an eye peeled for slippery John, public enemy No. 1.

"Yes, John limped a bit when he was here, but not seriously," the elder Dillinger said reminiscently of the visit at the farm April 7 and 8.

Doesn't "Aim to Lie."

He didn't "aim to lie to any one" and now that John was gone there was no use saying he hadn't been back home.

State officers at Indianapolis were shocked that the folk at Mooresville would let John Dillinger come home and say nothing about it to the police. It apparently was common knowledge that the outlaw, with a desperate record as a bank robber, killer and jail breaker, was in town, but the newspapers heard about it before the authorities.

"I simply can't understand," said Al G. Feeney, State safety director at Indianapolis, "why the good people of the town and its vicinity didn't notify the sheriff or some other police agency."

There was even a petition out in Mooresville to ask amnesty for Dil-

Death Threat Laid to Outlaw

Ohio Governor Is Ordered to Pardon Dillinger's 2 Doomed Pals.

Columbus, Ohio, April 19 (AP).—A death threat, believed to have come from the John Dillinger gang and aimed at Gov. George White, tonight was being traced by postal authorities.

A letter, the handwriting apparently disguised, and signed "Friends of Harry and Charley," was received by th eexecutive April 10, he disclosed today.

The letter contained a threat that unless the Governor pardons Harry Pierpont and Charles Makley, convicted murderers of Sheriff Jess L. Sarber of Allen County, he would not live until the end of his term.

Pierpont and Makley are under sentence to die in the electric chair July 13. They were captured with Dillinger in Arizona and tried in Lima, Ohio, for the killing of Sarber on October 12.

The Governor said he gave the letter to Postmaster Nate McCoy, of Columbus, "and he submitted it to postal inspectors." He added that he was not alarmed by the threat.

At Washington, Postoffice Department officials said they had received no official word of the letter.

Cannon Tells Tactics To Dodge Fund Law

Formed 2 Committees Self as Head, to Avoid Making Reports.

By Frank Getty.

In a resonant, singsong voice that carried to every corner of a hushed courtroom, Bishop James Cannon, jr., testified yesterday that he deliberately organized two anti-Smith committees in Virginia in 1928 so that certain contributions need not be reported to Congress.

Admitting blandly that he appointed himself chairman of both committees, and that they had identical offices and stationery, the silvery-haired old churchman asserted he made these arrangements after a careful study of the Federal corrupt practices act, which he and Miss Ada Burroughs are charged with conspiring to violate.

"I decided that every State should have its own separate organization, entirely independent of the Headquarters Committee of Anti-Smith Democrats," said the bishop, emphasizing his words and gazing fixedly at a spot above the wall clock, "so that they would not be called upon to make reports of any kind."

It is for their failure to report to Congress certain contributions of

HOLC Head Pushes Work In "Clean-up"

Investigators Are Checking on All State Offices, Fahey Declares.

Special Investigators of the Home Owners Loan Corporation yesterday continued an extensive check of all State offices in an effort to bring to light irregularities or inefficiencies in the system.

Chairman John H. Fahey said last night that his organization's legal department had 15 or 20 cases of a criminal nature under investigation in various offices. The chairman declared, however, that such investigations were of a "routine nature" and that they had been going on for some time.

Asked whether the irregularities had their inception during his chairmanship of the corporation, or during that of his predecessor, William F. Stevenson, Mr. Fahey declared they might have occurred almost any time.

Spokesmen at his office asserted the corporation had just begun to function when he took over the reins, and that Fahey might have "inherited" many of the troubles.

The chairman himself, however, declared that he would not attempt to "sidestep any responsibility." He said the corporation's regular investigators, who are assigned to a constant checking of offices, would continue their hunt and that anything "undesirable" would be rooted out as quickly as it was found.

Among the matters reported yesterday to be under investigation were the use of offices for drinking and dancing. Mr. Fahey denied this last night, saying if such happenings had occurred in any offices, his officials had not been informed of it.

"I never heard of it before," he said. "No such complaint was ever filed with us."

Discussing the general "investigation," Mr. Fahey said his organization kept a force of inspectors in the field and that as fast as anything off color is detected, it is eliminated.

"These things are liable to crop up any time," he said.

Resignations of six State managers have occurred since a tightening process was set to work in

Housing Plan Hoped to Tap 1,500 Million

President Meets Leaders to Lay Plans for New Mortgage Set-up.

By Leon Dure, jr.

The Administration's vast housing campaign, conceived to release as much as $1,500,000,000 in private capital for home modernization and repairs, appeared imminent yesterday following a survey by President Roosevelt with most of his recovery leaders.

Tentative plans call for asking Congress to establish a new Federal mortgage insurance corporation, which would guarantee loans made with a view to stimulating the construction industry, still suffering the paralysis of depression.

Details are still in a "formative stage," but should be ready for announcement within a fortnight. By that time decisions must be reached on such questions as how to manage so far-reaching a program, whether to extend its benefits to industry and commercial business and additional credit legislation.

Together with this new expansion of credit, expected to reach into every hamlet in the Nation, another campaign of publicity would be launched. Both lenders and borrowers would be enlisted in a new drive to bring the most laggard of the business groups closer to the font.

Frank C. Walker, chairman of the National Emergency Council, who has been busy in developing the program for some weeks, headed the conferees at the White House. Others attending included Secretaries Morgenthau, Wallace, Roper, Perkins and Ickes; Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins, RFC Chairman Jesse Jones, and Director of the Budget Lewis W. Douglas.

As spokesman, Walker said the discussion had been general, with many problems still unsolved. Among them is the coordination of the Government's many housing projects, now scattered among the New Deal alphabet. The new mortgage fund, it was thought, might be administered by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Although the amount of private capital that could be induced to the

Harrington Hotel Thug Binds 3 Employes, Flees With $644

A swarthy robber who about noon yesterday entered the Harrington Hotel offices, on the sixth floor, bound three employes with adhesive tape, and escaped with a $644 pay roll was the object of a city-wide search by police last night.

Wearing a jaunty, gray felt hat, the bandit boarded the elevator and asked to be taken to the business office. Inside he found Mrs. Bertha Kruz, of the 1200 block I street northwest, the bookkeeper, alone.

"Put 'em up as high as you can get 'em," he commanded, covering Mrs. Kruz with a revolver.

A moment later Haccort Gilkes, colored bellboy, appeared and was covered by the intruder, who demanded to know where the money was kept. Shortly after Gilkes' arrival, Harrison Wallace, of the 1300 block of Quincy street northwest, the auditor, entered.

The robber made his three victims lie on the floor while he bound their hands, feet and mouths with adhesive tape. Wallace refused to reveal the whereabouts of the money, but the bandit discovered the safe was open. The drawer containing the cash was locked, and an attempt to open it with a pair of scissors failed.

Fifteen minutes after the bandit stepped from the elevator and disappeared Wallace freed himself and called police. He described the robber as being about 6 feet tall and weighing about 200 pounds.

House Passes D. C. Budget; Sharp Slash Made in Fund

Utilities Board Slash Retained

28 Members on House Floor as Measure Is Steam-Rolled.

By J. D. Secrest.

A well-oiled Cannon-Blanton machine, supported by House Democratic leaders, yesterday rode roughshod over a handful of friends of the District in the House and passed the 1935 District supply bill with a reduced Federal contribution and with none of the restorations in estimates asked by the District Commissioners and approved by the Budget Bureau.

Enraged because a point of order had been sustained against the proposed tax rate reduction from $1.50 to $1.20, Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, raised a point of order which eliminated the entire $5,700,000 Federal contribution, but agreed to a restoration of $4,364,295 on an amendment offered by Chairman Cannon of the subcommittee in charge of the bill.

The $4,364,295 was arrived at by deducting $1,335,705, which represented 70 per cent of a Public Works Administration grant last year of $1,906,150 for sewer construction. Chairman Cannon held that the District should be required to pay this amount back to the Federal Government, though it had been understood by both District and PWA officials that the entire grant was made with no expectations that any of it would be repaid.

Rainey Rebukes Blanton.

In fact, at the time the grant was made the District Commissioners informed the PWA they would accept no part of it if the District were expected to repay any part of it.

The slash in the Federal contribution to the lowest point in District history was made at the climax of a tumultuous session during which Blanton was rebuked by Speaker Rainey for using "objectionable language" and "impugning the motives" of Representative Ditter (Republican), Pennsylvania, who led a valiant but unsuccessful fight to restore many of the cuts in estimates made by the Democratic majority of the sub-committee, of which he is a member.

On several other occasions, Blanton engaged in a bitter word battle with members of his own party, including Chairman Norton of the House District Committee, and was rebuked by Representative Keller (Democrat), Illinois.

He very nearly came to blows with Representative Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, when he constantly interrupted the latter as he was

Houghton's 61 Breaks Record

Kenwood Pro Cards 9 Pars and 9 Birdies; Has 13 One-Putt Greens.

What is believed to be a new world's noncompetitive golf record for a par 70 course was established yesterday afternoon by Al Houghton, Kenwood professional, who negotiated the difficult Washington Golf and Country Club layout in 61 strokes.

During this eventful shotmaking that had his four playing companions—Dave Thomson, Tommy Webb, jr., Dorsey C. Gruver, G. T. Howard and W. R. McCallum—almost speechless with amazement, Houghton carved out nine birdies and as many pars, and used up only 33 putts. He had 13 one-putt greens, 8 of which were achieved on the first nine.

Houghton wrote his epoch-making score into books with the aid of a new set of woods and irons and a magic putter that found their objective with such remarkable skill and accuracy that the Kenwood pro strode across the greens and fairways as if his clubs were robot-manned.

He was out in 30 and back in 31 on one of the toughest courses in the Middle Atlantic section, a course that has stumped some of the greatest, even Bobby Jones. It clipped two shots off the previously claimed mark of 63 hung up by Jones at the par 72 East Lake, at Atlanta, some years ago.

Jury Censures Influence Sale As Pernicious

D. C. Findings Sent to Roosevelt, Garnett and Justice Department.

"Pernicious practices" of persons selling or attempting to sell their influence were scored in a special District grand jury report, which was in the hands of President Roosevelt yesterday.

No indictments were found, but the report was made at the conclusion of the jury's long investigation last month and transmitted to United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, to the President, to the War Department and to the Department of Justice.

The jury found that there had been dissension between Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, and the general staff, "the blame being attributable to both."

Findings of the Jury.

Other findings included:

"The equally pernicious practice of persons and corporations employing such persons (lobbyists) for their alleged influence.

"Inconsistency in the quartermaster general's office as to prices in respect to the sale of surplus property.

"The reprehensible conduct of a large motor manufacturer in the making of a contingent contract providing for the payment of a contingent commission to a person not then a member of this bar, for alleged services in securing an award by the War Department on contracts which could be awarded to the lowest bidder only.

"Continuation of a practice existing in the War Department for several years and partly responsible for this condition of negotiating the sale of surplus property, instead of advertising and selling to the highest bidder."

The jurors urged "corrective administrative action be taken to the end that the condition which gave rise to this investigation may be eliminated, and in the hope that affirmative action may be taken by Congress, if necessary, to prevent political lawyers from presenting claims for clients to friends of such lawyers in high public office."

Fruits of the Inquiry.

"As a part of one branch of the Government," the jurors said, "we hope that we are within our province in making these suggestions to another branch of the Government to the end that the fruits of our lengthy and exhaustive investigation may not be lost."

The investigation which resulted in the report began when awarding of contracts for Army motorization was stopped. It included also an investigation of the sale of surplus War Department materials. The inquiry lasted about five weeks.

Following the conclusion of the inquiry, Justice Peyton Gordon criticized the grand jury for making a report which he said was unauthorized. Woodring issued a statement in which he said there was no foundation for a report that differences existed between the General Staff and himself.

Housing Plan Laid To Tap 1½ Billion

rescue of the building trades was speculative, surveys have convinced some leaders that at least $1,500,000,000 is available for this purpose. This belief, together with the fact that the mortgages losses average is small, is responsible for the present plan.

Jobs for 1,000,000.

Supporters of this means to provide employment, believed by some to offer 1,000,000 jobs, emphasize that the amount of Government money involved will not be considerable. It is also seen as a cheaper form of public works, since the Government assumes only a contingent liability.

Figures show the value of construction shrunk abnormally even among the capital goods industries at the onset of the depression. The total of all public and private construction at the peak in 1928 reached $11,339,000,000, compared to $2,980,000,000 last year. The housing campaign, together with extensive slum clearance and public works next year, is hoped to stem this downward trend.

Norris Dam Houses Will Rent for $14

Knoxville, Tenn., April 19 (AP).—Plans for building at least 100 new low-type fireproof houses for the town of Norris, which will be rented to laborers on Norris Dam for $14 a month, was announced today by Earle S. Draper, head of the housing and land planning for the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Draper said the houses would cost less than $2,000.

Darrow Review Board To Remain, Nye Asserts

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, said after a conference with President Roosevelt yesterday that reports to the effect that the Darrow board to review NRA code complaints would be abolished were "just poppy-cock," the Associated Press reported.

Nye said he went to see the President after hearing reports the board would not be continued. He added the board was created by executive order and was completely divorced from NRA.

fighting for a restoration of the 43 per cent cut in the Public Utilities Commission estimates.

The bill was rushed through in record time with an average of 30 members on the floor, except when Democrats were needed to defeat one of the score of amendments offered by Ditter, Mrs. Norton and others. At such points one of the House leaders would whistle and a flock of Democrats would emerge in time to vote with the committee.

Roll Call Prevented.

House leaders had previously sent out instructions to all regulars to be available to vote against any amendments to the bill. Both Mrs. Norton and Representative Cochran called attention to the small number of members present, and several threats were made to call for a quorum. Only the desire of both sides to adjourn over the week-end prevented a roll call.

Cochran also said that he hoped the Senate would take notice of the small attendance and the fact that members were called from the Democratic cloak room to vote on amendments "they don't know anything about."

Mrs. Norton asked Blanton whether he "thinks it fair to the District to vote on this bill with only 28 members on the floor?"

The only changes made in the bill were made by the sub-committee dominated by Cannon and Blanton. Besides cutting the Federal contribution, they agreed to drop a provision which would have limited the Police Department to one assistant superintendent, and restored $13,575 they had lopped off the salaries of District Supreme Court justices.

In its zeal for rigid economy the sub-committee had taken 5 per cent off the salaries of the justices only to discover that the economy act has never applied to them.

The net fiscal effect of these changes was to raise the District appropriations by $13,575 to $32,650,657.94 and to cut the Federal contribution by $1,335,705, which gave the District a net loss of $1,321,130.

Smallest U. S. Contribution.

The Federal contribution carried in the bill as it passed the House is the smallest ever made to the present form of District Government. Despite an annual fight by the Senate for a larger lump contribution, Congress has steadily cut this appropriation for the Federal share in District expenses within the last few years. The largest contribution within recent years was $9,500,000 in 1931 and 1932. A new low was reached last year when a compromise was reached on $5,700,000. This was reinserted by the Budget Bureau over the protests of the District Commissioners and approved by the sub-committee in reporting the bill.

That the slash had been anticipated, however, was evident to friends of the District yesterday after Ditter raised the point of order which struck the tax rate cut from the bill because it was a legislative rider on an appropriations measure.

Framers of the bil had carefully included the $5,700,000 Federal appropriation in the same paragraph with the tax cut so that as soon as one was held inappropriate the other was left subject to the same point of order. Cannon was then in a position to jockey for a reduced Federal contribution.

While District officials and District friends in the House were confident yesterday that the Senate would restore the Federal appropriation to at least the $5,700,000 carried in the Budget Bureau estimates, they feared that a fight may develop during the last days of Congress that might prevent passage of the bill.

Blanton Threatens Senate Bill.

Blanton pointed out this possibility to newspapermen and threatened that the same fate awaits the present bill if the Senate proves too liberal.

Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, made an unsuccessful attempt to restore the $5,700,000 figure to the bill after Cannon had offered two amendments, the first of which would have placed the Federal appropriation at $2,200,000. Both he and Ditter made vain pleas that Congress owed at least that much to the District.

"This is the first time that you have had Democratic District Commissioners in a long time, and yet you slap them in the face with this," Palmisano said.

Mrs. Norton interrupted a speech by Chairman Buchanan, of the Appropriations Committee, in favor of the cut to ask: "Why hamstring the District at a time when so many municipal projects are needed?"

Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, in a discussion of the District tax rate, which he termed 50 per cent of that of any comparable city, admitted that Washingtonians have a right to complain about having no franchise. He then reiterated his scheme proposed recently to the House District Committee.

This scheme was that the Federal Government take full control of all existing Government property and all that it anticipates it will need within the next hundred years or so and cut off the rest of the District, which could then be ceded back to Maryland. No resident of the present District would be permitted to live in the National Capital.

Snell Steps In.

It was during the debate on the Federal contribution that Blanton engaged in such a vindictive and abusive harangue of Ditter for defending the District interests that Minority Leader Snell demanded that Blanton's words be taken down and that the Speaker rule on whether they constituted personal abuse of a colleague.

Following general turmoil, the whole proceedings of the House were held up for a quarter of an hour while a reporter transcribed Blanton's remarks. The fiery Texan administered a severe tongue-lashing of Ditter for not raising some of his objections to the bill when it was marked up by the sub-committee and chided him for being a new member and consequently being unfamiliar with District affairs.

"Why, even newspapers don't know how to spell his name correctly," he said. "They call him 'Mr. Ditt' and 'Mr. Ditton,' and yet they put his picture on their front pages."

Blanton said he believed all the publicity had "gone to his head," and it was to this statement that Snell took particular exception.

After the acting chairman, Representative Sears (Democrat), Florida, had relinquished the gavel to the Speaker, Rainey rebuked Blanton by ruling that he had used "objectionable language" and had impugned the "motives" of Ditter.

Following Blanton's rebuke, Snell moved that the Texan's remarks be stricken from the Record. The motion carried.

Although chagrined for the moment, Blanton made a motion to strike out the entire bill after the enacting clause in order to have an opportunity to deride Ditter again, but in milder language.

Blanton is "Discourteous."

Subsequently, Mrs. Norton accused Blanton of being discourteous when he refused to allow the House clerk to return to a section of the Tuberculosis Hospital item so that she might make an amendment in the appropriate place, and Keller told him he should "be ashamed" of himself.

During an encounter with Cochran, the Missourian told Blanton that he wouldn't be dictated to by the Texan.

As it passed the House, the District supply bill carries all but the inadvertent cut of $13,575 of the $817,761 lopped from the subsistence budget approved by the Budget Bureau.

It retained the 43 per cent cut of $37,323 in the Public Utilities Commission item, thereby, according to Acting Chairman Riley E. Elgen, practically terminating regulation of the local public utilities.

Both Cochran and Representative Harlan (Democrat), Ohio, made vain pleas for restoration of this estimate only to be shouted down by Blanton and Cannon.

Cannon charged that the commission had never effected a rate cut except by agreement and that it was useless "to ask the commission to do anything the public utilities don't want done." The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., he said, constituted "one of the greatest monopolies in the country."

Charge Blanton "Peeved."

Cochran asked Cannon why the cut had not been made last year, if the commission were guilty of such negligence, and accused Blanton of bringing about the reduction because he was "peeved" over the trips made by William A. Roberts, special counsel for the commission, and his payment of tips to maids and valets. Blanton had consumed considerable time during the sub-committee hearings questioning Roberts regarding his expense accounts.

Harlan pointed out that more than $11,000,000 in rates had been saved the consuming public since the commission was formed, 20 years ago, and that the budget cut would reduce the employes below the number allowed in 1913.

Cochran paid high tribute to Richmond B. Keech, the newly appointed member of the commission, and asked the members of the House to "give him a chance."

Riley E. Elgen, acting chairman of the commission, was severely criticized by Cannon when he threatened to object to the inclusion of a letter from Elgen in the record as asked by Cochran. He declared that Elgen had written "an apology and a defense of the high telephone rates" in a local utilities fortnightly.

Offered from the floor and defeated like clockwork by the Cannon-Blanton machine were:

To restore the $50,900 cut from the estimate of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, by Ditner.

To include $10,000 for an engineering survey preparatory to replacing Chain Bridge, by Smith (Democrat), Virginia.

To restore the municipal lighting estimates to $837,400, by Ditter.

To withhold the dog tax from dogs used to lead the blind, by Lee (Democrat), Missouri.

To furnish education aids to orphans of World War veterans at a cost of $3,600, by Ditter.

To restore $15,000 for improving and equiping Shaw Junior High School, by DePriest (Republican), Illinois.

To restore the $25,000 lopped from the fuel estimates for the schools, by Ditter.

To include the $150,000 asked by the District Commissioners to complete purchase of a site for the Jefferson Junior High School, by Weideman (Democrat), Michigan.

To restore $30,000 to the fire department for the purchase of new equipment, by Ditter.

To restore the jail estimates to $77,823 to eliminate the seven-day week now followed, by Jenckes (Democrat), Indiana.

To increase the appropriations for the Lorton Reformatory so that the guards will not be reduced and so that the walled group of buildings for dangerous prisoners might be completed, by Smith.

To restore the $3,744 cut from the Tuberculosis Hospital salaries, by Mrs. Norton.

Old Age Pensioners Total Now 135,000

New York, April 19 (AP).—The number of old age pensioners in the United States has increased from 4,000 four years ago to 135,000 persons now, Abraham Epstein reported today at the opening of a two-day National conference on social security.

Epstein, who is executive secretary of the American Association for Social Security, said 28 States now have old age pension laws.

Fahey Pushes Plan to Clean House in HOLC

Investigators Are Checking on All State Offices, Says Chairman.

the corporation. First to go were the managers in Illinois and New Jersey. The latest resignations occurred in California, Pennsylvania, Maine and Kansas.

Meanwhile, at Chicago, according to the Associated Press, William H. McNeal, general manager of the corporation, asserted that the progress of the Home Owners Loan had been satisfactory. McNeal said the corporation would have its $2,000,000,000 out by June, 1936, within the time limit set by statute.

McNeal, with other Washington officials, presided over a convention of some 200 HOLC employes from mid-Western States. He denied that a "shakeup" was in process.

Drastic Changes Hinted.

Observers last night commented that drastic changes in the HOLC have been in the wind since Fahey took over the chairmanship. This came about last summer when President Roosevelt replaced Stevenson with Fahey, New England publisher from Massachusetts. One-time president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Fahey started revamping the machinery. Resignations began to roll in.

The revelations this week of alleged conditions found in the corporation were not treated yesterday by officials as a new story. Most of them, including Fahey, minimized the accusations, but admitted that most of the allegations had some foundation in fact.

Typical of the conditions charged was the claim advanced by one employe that if a home owner paid him a fee his case would receive special consideration.

Another common charge was that valuations of houses were "hiked" by appraisers so that larger loans could be made. It was said that in some offices two or more houses were lumped into one valuation, despite the law which holds only owners of single houses are to be helped.

Collusion Charged.

Collusion was charged in some cases. It was alleged that arrangements would be made for the holder of a mortgage to threaten foreclosure in order that the mortgagor could secure a loan.

The charges of political tincture in the organization centered chiefly around the appointment of unsuited persons to positions of responsibility. Records of the corporation showed that the task of appraising values of homes had been entrusted to a former chauffeur to a Congressman. Storekeepers, barbers, florists and undertakers of the correct political flavor were given similar jobs.

In one instance one insurance company was to be given all insurance on home on which loans were made. One State officer was said to have remained in office despite repeated demands for his resignation, because he had "pull."

Resignations Fast.

One spokesman for the corporation last night, however, said there had been "no difficulty about resignations because they came in almost as fast as they were asked for, or even before."

As an indirect result of the disclosures of what the corporation had been rooting out, it was reported yesterday that the Norris amendment to bar political influence in the appointment of corporation officials might be revived. It was said, according to the Associated Press, that the amendment would be a part of a bill now pending to guarantee the principal of $2,000,000,000 in home loan bonds.

A conference report on the measure, with the Norris amendment eliminated, was approved this week by the House and sent to the Senate. Both President Roosevelt and Mr. Fahey are said to favor the amendment.

Mr. Stevenson was reported last night to be out of the city.

Henry Ford Asks Gates Not Be Tampered With

Savannah, Ga., April 19 (AP). Henry Ford, motor magnate, went into Federal court today to ask an injunction to restrain the commissioners of Bryan County from removing or opening three gates on his Bryan County holdings.

Certain residents of the county objected to the gates. The commissioners had planned to open them. Judge William H. Barrett took the petition under advisement. Ford was not in court.

Bishop Cannon Tells Tactics To Avoid Filing Fund Reports

largely within the limits of Virginia.

The Government contends the Jameson contributions totaling $65,300 were received by Cannon for his headquarters committee, and that the Virginia State committee was "fiction."

But the bishop, describing how the New Yorker gave him the money to use "when, how and where I pleased," told of organizing the Virginia committee and paved the way for the defense contention it was to this committee that $48,000 of "Jameson money" went.

Only Hesitates Once.

Only once did the somberly clad divine appear to falter in his studied testimony, most of which was given without questioning by counsel. That was when he said he decided, during the campaign, that all checks received as contributions should be deposited to the credit of the headquarters committee.

Otherwise, the first appearance on a courtroom witness stand of Bishop Cannon since his indictment three and one-half years ago was decidedely a histrionic success.

Carrying a double handful of documents, the bishop took the witness stand shortly after 2 p. m., and held forth for the better part of two hours on his career as a champion of prohibition and the transactions which got him into his present predicament.

"I'd like to say, your honor," he began, "that I am seriously inconvenienced, to say nothing else, by the death of the Rev. J. Sidney Peters."

Starts With Student Days.

It was with Dr. Peters that Cannon organized the anti-Smith campaign. The court admonished him to get on with his story, and the bishop returned to his student days at Randolph-Macon College.

Another common charge was that valuations of houses were "hiked" by appraisers so that larger loans could be made. It was said that in some offices two or more houses were lumped into one valuation, despite the law which holds only owners of single houses are to be helped.

Armour Write-Down Will Be Sought

New York, April 19 (AP).—The Sun says today that a plan for the recapitalization of Armour & Co. which will permit the company to write down its property some $70,000,000 in desired will be considered at a directors' meeting in Chicago tomorrow.

The Sun says Frederick H. Prince, Boston financier, who is prominently identified with Armour financies, has approved the plan.

liquor crowd and the political ring down there for years and I know them and I prefer to carry on my transactions in cash.

Jameson—That is O. K. by me.

Cannon—I want it understood that I am to spend this money when, how and where I please. Otherwise I won't accept it.

Jameson—Absolutely.

Jameson—How about North Carolina?

Cannon—Well, there's a good fight on there.

Jameson—Well, if you can spare them some of the money, it will be all right by me.

This, interrupted Justice Gordon, appeared to be a good place to stop for the day, and the bishop moved wearily from the stand to be surrounded by an admiring group of churchfolk who had held the front row seats since early morning.

Uncertain of Use.

The bishop explained putting some of the contributions in a private bank account, "because I was undecided whether they would be used in Virginia or throughout the South"—unreported or reported to Congress.

Cannon then told of a conference at which he and Dr. Peters arranged to have Frank P. Dunford, a life-long Republican, handle the funds to be spent for the Virginia campaign.

"I said at the time that I doubted if any reports to Congress would be required at all," said the bishop. "But I said we were going to make one for the headquarters committee.

"I said: 'It is my conclusion that no report need be made for Virginia.' Other State political groups do not make them."

Declaring he gave Dunford money at various times "to be spent entirely in Virginia at the direction of Dr. Peters," the bishop said he never knew who got the money until he heard the names in 1930, just before the Carraway committee hearings.

Checks Awaited Him.

The bishop described the joint headquarters of the "Headquarters Committee, Anti-Smith Democrats," and the "State committee" as he found them when he returned from Europe, wither he had been driven by "African fever." Quite a number of checks representing campaign contributions awaited him.

"How did you determine which of these checks should be used for the headquarters committee and which for the State committee?" asked Justice Gordon.

"I decided that all checks should be deposited to the credit of the headquarters committee," said Cannon.

The Government's counsel jumped as though stung by an unexpected wasp. The judge frowned in mild astonishment and gave the bishop another try. But he gave the same answer, while United States Attorney and his assistants, John J. Wilson and Roger Robb, sat grinning delightedly.

Cannon then gave the following version of his first conversation with Jameson.

Jameson—I have many friends in Virginia and am particularly interested in carrying Virginia for Hoover. Do you think you can do it?

Needed $50,000.

Cannon—We can if we organize properly.

Jameson—I will be glad to help.

Cannon—Well, we ought to have $50,000.

Jameson—I'll furnish it, in instalments. How do you want it?

Cannon—Give me $10,000 a week, mostly in cash.

Jameson—Aren't you afraid to carry it around?

Roosevelt War Debt Message Waited on Hill

Congress Leaders Hold Up Views Till Executive Tenor Is Known.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt has under consideration a message to Congress on the war debt situation.

It is expected he will confine it to a factual report on the existing status.

Most leaders on Capitol Hill are waiting for Mr. Roosevelt to speak before talking further themselves. An indication of the tenor, however, is contained in a clause approved by the House in passing the reciprocal tariff bill that nothing in it should be interpreted as giving the Executive power to cancel debts in negotiating the trade agreements.

The Chief Executive was reported ready to review discussion with Great Britain, but a view in an official quarter held little hope for such a parley on any immediate successful settlement.

Authorities here noted a demand in London for writing down Britain's debt, made by Sir Herbert Samuel, Liberal leader, during a debate in the House of Commons, on the new budget. For the third successive year, it omits any provision for debt payment.

It can be stated that Mr. Roosevelt has not altered his policy "that a debtor may at any time approach a creditor with representations concerning the debt and ask for readjustment."

D. A. R. Favors U. S. Air Force Equal of Any

Mrs. Dunne Relates How Lobbyists Are Kept at Arm's Length.

The Forty-third Continental Congress of the D. A. R. yesterday adopted a resolution urging that the United States have an air force "of strength and training and performance equal to that of the other nations of the world."

This was one of several resolutions adopted by the group which met to hear committee reports and complete most of the routine business of the congress.

How the D. A. R. is protected from the wiles of lobbyists and propagandists anxious to enlist its support was told by the National publicity chairman, Mrs. William Dunne, of the District.

Mrs. Dunne called the ways of these agents "devious" and said, "unlimited expense accounts are at their disposal and naturally they are required to deliver the goods." She told of the vigilance with which proposals asking for D. A. R. support are investigated.

Due Raise Proposed.

A resolution calling for the abolition of the committee on better films was defeated when it was brought on the floor. The group approved a resolution which would regroup certain of its committees.

A flurry of excitement which demanded a poll resulted from a proposed amendment to raise the National dues of the society from $2 to $3 a year. To everyone's surprise, Massachusetts, home State of the president general, Mrs. Russell William Magna, voted against the proposal.

The amendment received an affirmative vote and it will be sent to the forty-fourth congress next year for final action.

Six hundred and forty-six broadcasts from 93 stations of the D. A. R. made its radio dork last year outstanding, the congress was informed, in the report of Mrs. Gordon Newman, chairman of radio.

That John D. Rockefeller, jr., is creating in the restoration of Colonial Williamsburg, Va., a visible and monumental symbol of the high sentiment and unselfish devotion of the patriot fathers Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, rector of Bruton Parish Church, Williamsburg, Va., told the congress yesterday morning.

Scenic Highway Planned.

He said that $800,000 has been spent in research work alone, and up to the present the committee in charge has either moved or destroyed 345 buildings, restored 63, and reconstructed 72 and built two business blocks of stores and offices in colonial design. Jamestown, Williamsburg and Yorktown, in the area of the Colonial National Monument, will be connected by a scenic highway.

In Williamsburg the colonial college buildings of William and Mary including the Christopher Wren building, have been restored. The Governor's palace, the Capitol, and the Raleigh Tavern also have been rebuilt. Most of the colonial houses on Duke of Gloucester street and the spacious city greens have been restored. Within a year the telephone and power wires, which in Williamsburg as in China, hinder the return of ancestral spirits, will go underground, concrete streets will have vanished.

The credentials committee reported that the total registration for the congress is 2,344. Four delegates are here from England, three from the Philippines, and three from Paris. China, Cuba, Puerto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands also are represented. All States, including the District of Columbia, are represented, except Nevada.

Tree to Honor Hoover.

Iowa D. A. R. will plant a walnut tree from the birthplace of the first President of the United States born west of the Mississippi, Cedar Branch, Iowa, in honor of former President Herbert Hoover tomorrow.

This tree will be placed in the National Historical Grove, Anacostia Park, and is to be marked by a bronze tablet. The program is sponsored by the D. A. R. and the National Nut Tree Planting Council.

Dance music enlivened the day sessions yesterday when a special program was presented in connection with several of the reports dealing with Americanization and patriotic education work.

During the time allotted to the report of the Sons and Daughters of the U. S. A., Mrs. Robert Bagnell, chairman, a program given by officers and members of the District, Maryland and Virginia groups elicited much applause. One hundred children sang patriotic songs and Frank Warren, of Washington, aged 5, brought down the house with an Indian war dance. Lawrence Corvo took the part of the Indian chief. Among the other children who brought greetings were Ruth Connor, of the Alexander Hamilton Club; Howard McCoy and Richard Logan, a high school cadet. Mrs. George Vandeveer, councilor of all the clubs, also participated.

Boy Bugler Scores.

Another child in the limelight was Frank Gerchow, Boy Scout bugler, of Huntington, W. Va., who got out of a sick bed to appear yesterday during the report period of the committeeman on Americanism, Miss Mary C. Welch, chairman.

One hundred and fifty freshmen are housed in the Caroline Scott Harrison Memorial dormitory at Oxford College, Ohio, Mrs. Walter C. Tobey, of Hamilton, told the Congress in her report yesterday aftrenoon. The memorial is in honor of the first prseident general, Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, wife of the then President of the United States.

Miss Mary C. Welch, chairman of the Americanization committee, reported $21,000 was expended on this work in the past year and that one of the most important duties of the committee is to contact illiterate mothers.

Five hundred and sixty-six clubs of the Sons and Daughters of the United States of America have been organized with a combined membership of 35,547 boys and girls, an increase of more than 8,000 over last year.

There are 17 schools on the D. A. R. list to which scholarships are given yearly, Mrs. William H. Pouch, chairman, said in her report. Two of these are D. A. R. schools, the Kate Duncan Smith, at Grant, Ala., and Tamassee, at Tamassee, S. C.

Oldest Delegate 83.

An index of the 1850 Census of Oregon Territory has been compiled under the auspices of the Genalogical committee, Mrs. C. K. Moore, chairman. The census of California has also been indexed it is said.

The oldest delegate attending the Congress is Mrs. Mary D. Fisk, 83, from the San Raphael Hills Chapter of Los Angeles. Mrs. Fisk has attended every Continental Congress since Memorial Continental Hall has been built. For many years she represented the Mary Murray Chapter of New York City.

An unusual number of students applied for aid to the Student Loan committee of the D. A. R. last year, due to the financial stringency, Mrs. Walter I. Tobey, chairman, reported in telling how 858 students were helped last year in comparison with 736 the previous year. To date this committee has assisted 2,896 students in their attempts to secure an education.

The Americanization School of the District of Columbia, the Italians from the Germantown Community Center, and the Ukrainian Institute, Philadelphia, assisted in putting on the program in connection with the report of the committee on Americanism.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Speak.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President of the United States, is the star speaker on today's program at the D. A. R. Congress. Mrs. Roosevelt will take for her topic "The Education of Our Mountain Children," and a full attendance is guaranteed in the congress while she is speaking. This afternoon the D. A. R. Congress will put aside legislation and election speculation and go to the White House, where they will be the guests at a special reception by President and Mrs. Roosevelt at 3:30 p. m.

New business and the installation of the newly elected vice presidents general will occupy today's short session. At the White House it is understood Mrs. Roosevelt will be assisted in receiving by Mrs. Russell William Magna, president general.

A banquet at the Hotel Mayflower tonight will mark the end of the congress, and before tomorrow practically all delegates will be en route home.

Austrian Leaders Near Showdown

The Kick, Tho, Is in the Hooch

U. S. Starts Heavy Drive on Bootleggers; "Should Have Kick in Pants for Buying" From Them, Says Wellingham, FACA Aid.

(Associated Press.)

A wide sweep against bootleggers and manufacturers of illicit liquor was in progress last night, with Secretary Morgenthau pledging the strength of the Treasury Department t ohit this illegal industry "and hit it hard."

An idea of the size of the task was given by Harris E. Willingham, assistant director of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, who said "about as much illegal liquor as legal liquor is sold."

Terming it still a "very husky industry," Morgenthau told reporters yesterday that revenue agents seized 73 stills, 84,000 gallons of liquor and 173,000 gallons of mash last week. He added, however, rum-running on the high seas was much less than before repeal.

Merger of the alcohol beverage unit of the Justice Department and the Bureau of Industrial Alcohol of the Treasury, due to be completed by May 10, already has started with a view to giving the Government a unified liquor squad of more than 1,000 men.

Willingham said "the man who buys from the bootlegger ought to get a kick in the pants."

"Two months ago," he said, "there might have been a reason to go to the bootlegger to get fair-quality liquor cheaply. With the drop in price and the improvement in quality of legal liquor, any such reason no longer exists."

Habits of the prohibition era were said by officials to have caused many people to continue doing business with the racketeers. The Government believes that in general the same men who were active in the liquor industry during the dry period are still dominating the illicit industry.

A partial explanation of continued patronage on bootleggers was thought to lie in the fact that the outlaws occasionally give better service, being willing to make night deliveries and otherwise accommodate patrons.

So clever have such men been they are reported to have set up plants to make bottles and labels to imitate the paraphernalia used by legitimate liquor dealers.

Mortgage Firm Note Holders Lose Bank Suit

Hopes of 102 holders of the defunct firm of Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey to collect $2,341,645.80 from the Riggs National Bank were blasted yesterday when Justice Jesse C. Adkins dismissed a suit brought by the holders.

The note holders contended that the Riggs Bank was responsible to them for allowing Edmund Rheem and Luther Swartzell, former officers of the mortgage loan firm, to transfer the money from a special account listed to the bank as trustees to a general account of the loan company.

The fund, it was shown, was intended to enable the Swartzell firm to refinance the Shoreham Building and complete another deal with the Shoreham and Hurley-Wright Buildings to be exchanged.

The $2,000,000 fund was deposited and title companies were then notified that an amount sufficient to retire the notes secured by the Shoreham Building was on hand. The original first trust was then released on the official records and the building was financed by loans from the New York Life.

However, persons holding approximately $800,000 in uotes secured by the original trust were never paid the face value of their holdings and they brought suit to hold the Riggs Bank responsible to them for permitting Rhem and Swartzell to deplete the special account. Judge Adkins ruled, after a two weeks' trial, that there was no showing that the Riggs Bank acted in bad faith. On the contrary, he said, the bank had done all that it was required to do under the circumstanes.

Third Paid

Jones Reveals Status of Huge Dawes Loan.

Nearly a third of the $80,000,000 "Dawes loan" to the Central Republic Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been repaid, Chairman Jesse H. Jones said yesterday.

A total of $61,929, of the loan which figured in the 1932 Presidential campaign, still was unpaid April 13, Jones said.

The bank is in liquidation and both interest and principal owed the RFC are in default. Jones said the Dawes account is being carried as "past due." He said there was a "little money coming in on the loan all of the time."

Dollfuss Aims At Full Power; Showdown Due

Heimwehr Will Be Taken Into New Set-up and Aids Set Aside.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Vienna, April 19.—Definite evidence of serious dissension in government ranks brought the declaration in sources close to Chancellor Dollfuss tonight that he feels the time has come for a showdown and that there can not be three dictators in Austria.

The dynamic little leader means to insist, therefore, that the Fascist Heimwehr, commanded by his two main coworkers, Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg and Vice Chancellor Emil Fey, consent to absorption in Dollfuss' Fatherland Front, and to demand strict adherence to authoritative leadership, with himself as chief.

Many rumors swept Vienna. Most were in connection with the impending return from Rome of Prince von Starhemberg, who played an important role in the recent Socialist civil war and since has been prominent in politics.

Talks With Duce.

The prince talked with Premier Mussolini yesterday about Austrian and Italian Fascism, and later said the forthcoming Austrian constitution will draw its inspiration from the latter creed.

Semiofficially it was said Von Starhemberg will take some post in the government; one unofficial version was that he will become vice chancellor.

Such a development, however, would touch upon the fate of the third triumvir, Fey, who, according to some reports, will become minister of defense and according to others will be eliminated from the Dollfuss cabinet.

Devoted followers of the vice chancellor among the subordinate Heimwehr (home guard) leaders are furious at what they consider an intrigue against Fey.

Irked by Agreement.

They are particularly nettled by Dollfuss' week-end announcement that he had reached a "whole agreement" with Von Starhemberg for subordinating the Heimwehr to the Fatherland Front.

Sources close to the chancellor declare Dollfuss will emerge from the present troubled situation the undisputed master of Austria.

On the other hand, more outspoken followers of Fey declare that "even if Dollfuss gets around Starhemberg and Fey, the latter will not allow himself to be tossed aside casually."

Here and there among the Heimwehr stubborn voices hint darkly that "we will not go down without fighting."

Roper Talks on Recovery; Cummings Pleads for Crime Curb.

Others were Mrs. Charles B. Letton, Nebraska; Mrs. Edmond P. Moody, Delaware; Mrs. Everest George Sewell, Georgia, and Mrs. W. E. Stanley, Kansas.

Mrs. Emmett Wilson, California, was elected to the post of reporter general to the Smithsonian Institution. She was the only nominee.

Secretary Roper referred indirectly to the Wirt affair when he spoke against "coffee cup seers" in asking recovery support.

"If there are those in our Government," he said, "who oppose our form of democracy, they should be located and intelligently eliminated.

"But in the name of common sense, let us be protected from the muddled brains of coffee-cup seers. We need informed, poised, constructive men and women who will repudiate all destructive surmises and rumors until such rumors are tested for truthfulness."

Senate Group Finishes Draft Of Stock Bill

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

After weeks of bitter controversy, the Senate Banking and Currency Committee yesterday completed, for all practical purposes, its work on the Fletcher-Rayburn stock market regulation bill.

In an all-day session the committee gave final approval to each section, but postponed reporting the measure to the Senate until today in order that as many members of the group as possible could be present. It was regarded as improbable that any further changes would be made in the measure, which has been rewritten in virtually every section.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, who has been fighting for a bill with "teeth" in it, pronounced the final draft satisfactory, with the "possible exception" of section 7, which deals with marginal requirements.

Roosevelt's Mind Open.

Whether the measure contains all the "teeth" which President Roosevelt believes should be in it is not fully clear. Since his return from his Florida fishing trip the President has kept an open mind on some of the changes made by the Senate committee which are opposed by members of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, handling the measure at the other end of the Capitol.

Last-minute efforts to eliminate from the bill several restrictive sections was rejected by the majority, although the voting was close. It was not thought possible, however, that these moves, if made, would be successful today.

Meanwhile the House Interstate Commerce Commission was at work behind closed doors on the revised draft of the bill prepared by its sub-committee. It was believed the committee would be ready to make a report in another day or two, upholding in general the work of the sub-committee.

Early Action Indicated.

Thus it appeared that the revised stock-market bill would go to the House and Senate calendars before the week ends or early next week. Chariman Fletcher of the Senate committee said he proposed to press for action as soon as the bill was reported and that he believed the Senate would take the bill up for debate within a week or ten days.

Proposals to transfer administration of the 1933 securities act from the Federal Trade Commission to the Federal Securities Exchange Commission, the new agency proposed by the Senate bill to have jurisdiction over security exchanges, will be made on the Senate floor.

Efforts also will be made to attach to the stock market bill a rider modifying the securities act. The latest proposal in this direction came from Senator Kean (Republican), New Jersey, who will move to repeal the securities act in its entirety and substitute in its place that section of the British companies act dealing with the issuing and sale of securities.

New Agency Proposed.

The House committee favors administration by the Trade Commission, while the Senate group proposes a securities exchange commission.

The Senate committee rewrote the marginal section to leave with the proposed commission the fixing of marginal requirements, except that the Federal Reserve Board would have power to fix such requirements for banks in the Reserve System.

The House Committee changed the original marginal section in the bill so that as it now stands it provides that the standard requirements for margins shall range between 25 and 45 per cent, although these may be raised or lowered by the Federal Reserve Board as conditions warrant.

There is some reason to believe that in refusing to accept the two changes made by the Senate Committee, the House group wishes to establish a trading position in conference with the prospect that in the end the measure will provide for a new agency and the House language on marginal requirements.

Committee Rewrites Section.

The Senate committee yesterday rewrote again section 2, labeled "necessity for regulation as provided in this act." In its original form this section was assailed as a "stump speech"—meaning nothing—and as a radical provision giving the Government far-reaching powers over industry.

One day out of the bill and the next day in the measure in a revised form, this section as finally approved appeared to satisfy all groups. It was designed to establish the basis for the constitutionality of the legislation while not giving the administrative authority any powers not specifically conferred in other sections.

Maryland Studies Teacher Situation

Survey to Determine How Many Get Jobs.

Baltimore, April 19 (Spl.). whether graduates of Maryland normal schools have a better chance now to obtain jobs than they did several years ago is to be determined by a study of the teaching situation in the State by Dr. Albert S. Cook, State superintendent of education.

Dr. Cook expects to report his findings to the Maryland State Board of Education May 25.

Several years ago the schools of the State were unable to absorb all the graduates of the State normal schools. Many students, after completing three years of work learning to be teachers were unable to find jobs. The situation has changed, it is reported, and there may be an actual lack of teachers, especially in the rural districts.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Sleep.

The evening meal has much to do with the quiet of sleep. Eating a heavy meal at night may result in very restless sleeping.

There is a general belief that eating certain foods for supper is a principal cause of nightmare, night terror and sleep walking. Those who hold this view may be willing to admit that fear is a factor, but they insist that food is also one. On the other hand, a light evening meal tends to promote quiet sleep, in the general opinion. A common saying is: "I was so hungry I could not sleep," and "hunger woke me from a sound sleep."

In recent years some scientific foundation for these popular opinions and sayings has been established. A part of the work of the stomach is accomplished by wave-like muscle movements which start at the liver end of the sac and progress toward the left. In hunger there are contractions of this muscle wall, starting at the left side and progressing toward the liver. These contractions are associated with hunger. They may cause discomfort and even pain, a common name for them being hunger pains. They start some five hours after meals, and they follow at intervals of a few minutes. During a night's sleep of eight hours or thereabouts these stomach wall contractions may be strong enough to cause restless sleep, at least in some persons.

Dr. Donald A. Laird and Miss Hilda Drexel report that eating a light evening meal composed of simple, easily digested foods tends to make the night's sleep peaceful and quiet by at least lessening these hunger contractions of the stomach wall. On the other hand, they found that an evening meal consisting of foods difficult to digest and slow of digestion caused the night's sleep to be restless. They experimented with three types of evening meal. The first was composed of simple, easily digested foods, and the second of foods that threw a good deal of work on the stomach, that stayed in the stomach a considerable time, and that tended to bring about gas. The third was foods that contained considerable liquid or, because of other ingredients tended to stimulate kidney action. The first made for restful sleep. The last two caused tossing and muscular and mental restlessness.

A secondary observation by Dr. Laird and Miss Drexel, not related closely to the points under discussion here, was that sleepers divide themselves into two classes. Diminuendo sleepers are most restless in the first hour of sleep. As the hours progress they become more and more quiet. Crescendo sleepers quickly fall into quiet sleep and, as the hours go by, they become increasingly restless. In studying the effects of an evening meal, or of a visit to the movies, or of an evening of excited play, it is necessary to know to which type the child studied belongs.

Weak at 91 Years.

L. D. H. writes: I am 91½ years old. A year ago my strength gave out almost completely and I have been confined to my room since, not even dressed, although I sit up most of the time during the day. My appetite is good and I rest well nights. I suffer no pain and, so far as I know, all organs function normally, but I do not get my strength back, although much stronger than I was. Do you think it possible for me to recover and get about again? If so, what foods should I eat?

2. I was interested in your recent article on iron. Is the albumen in egg harmful to the system?

Reply.

1. You are doing wonderfully well and are to be congratulated. You can not expect much comeback in strength, but discuss with your physician whether glycin or ephedrin have any possibilities in your case.

2. Egg albumen is an excellent food, but at your age little of it is needed.

Tariff Proposal Stirs Philippine Nationalists

Manila, April 19 (AP).—If Congress is going to tax coconut oil, and possibly other Philippine products, before Filipinos have a chance to accept the Tydings-McDuffie independence act, the pro-Independista party announced today it favors the recently renewed immediate independence demand.

Party leaders issued a manifesto hitting the proposed 3 to 5 cent oil tax as "fatal, unfair and obnoxious."

Move to Change Utilities Bill Flayed by Cox

11 Judiciary Committee Members Flayed for Vote on Plan.

The House Rules Committee yesterday heard charges that 11 House Judiciary Committee members, who voted for a substitute for the Johnson Senate bill curbing utilities in rate fight action, were siding with the public utilities.

Representative E. E. Cox (Democrat), Georgia, asserted "the substitute is a kiss on the cheek and a pat on the back—a concession to the utilities."

The Georgian was backed up by Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, with the charge that under the substitute measure "the utilities can sneak into Federal courts," and otherwise commit "abuses" against the public to evade the State courts.

Chairman Hatton Sumners, of the Judiciary Committee, which favorably reported, 11 to 10, the revised measure, indicated he favored the Senate bill.

The House bill restricts the method of appeal by utilities from orders of the State administrative boards, but does not prevent Federal courts from having jurisdiction as in the original Senate measure. The bill is designed to prevent prolonged litigation proceedings by utilities in efforts to thwart and delay rate and other decisions by State commissions.

The sponsor of the measure, Representative Lawrence Lewis (Democrat), Colorado, in urging the Rules Committee to give right of way to the measure, held that utilities often attempted to "corrupt State commissions," and that Federal courts should not be banned from jurisdiction.

It was indicated that a serious effort would be made when the bill comes up on the floor to replace it with the bill sponsored in the Senate by Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), California.

Former Delegate Out for Postal Job

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 19 (Spl.).—Cleveland M. Seibert, attorney, a former member of the House of Delegates from Berkeley County and also former mayor here, yesterday declared his candidacy for appointment as postmaster here.

In his statement he denied reports that he was not a candidate, and added, "I have passed the requisite civil service examination."

Whiting C. Faulkner, attorney, is serving as postmaster under a temporary appointment and is a candidate for the full term appointment.

Volunteer Firemen Seek Return of Appropriation

Hagerstown, Md., April 19 (Spl.).—The board of county commissioners will be asked to restore the $200 annual appropriation to each volunteer fire company by the Washington County Volunteer Firemen's Association. The appropriation was reduced to $100 two years ago.

The association contends that services rendered by the companies in rural areas is worth $200 annually, and that it is necessary to meet expenses.

Deaf School Board Sets Special Meeting

Staunton, Va., April 19 (Spl.).—W. H. East, president of the board of visitors of the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind, announced here today that a special meeting has been called for next Thursday.

The board is expected to consider charges against Superintendent H. M. McManaway, alleging inefficiency. Alumni of the institution have been invited to have representatives present.

Mail Inquiry Hears Howes Tell of Operators Session

Roosevelt agreed on $14,000,000, against the previous Administration's $20,000,000 a year.

Following this decision, he said, a letter was sent to all the contractors asking them to send representatives to Washington to decide what should be done.

"Calling in the operators is the only rational way of obtaining information and the only rational way to proceed, is it not?" Austin asked.

"I think it is all right," Howes replied.

"Is it true that you were not required by law to call in the operators?"

"That is right."

"It was the only decent thing to do?"

"I consider it so."

Farley Not Listed.

Howes said every contracting company was represented at the meeting and that departmental officials and Chairman Mead of the House Postoffice Committee were present.

The witness did not list Postmaster General Farley among those attending.

The witness said that he was surprised by the attitude of the operators because they agreed to fewer cuts in service than he had anticipated.

"We did not want to discriminate among operators and we wanted to disturb the existing service as little as possible," Howes said. "If an operator had been receiving 30 per cent of the total payments, we wanted him to receive 30 per cent of the $14,000,000. I thought the operators knew better than we did what could best be cut out."

Howes said the United Airways agreed they would take a reduction in payments but would not reduce their service.

"How much of the flying is gratuitous now?" Austin asked.

"There is a low percentage of the companies carrying mail free," Austin replied.

He explained that specific routes are not being flown without cost but that total payments have been reduced. Austin asked if the reduction amounted to 40 per cent, and Howes replied it was nearer 33 per cent.

Howes said after the meeting he felt that perhaps he had not been fair with the curtailments, "but as long as the companies were willing I intended to keep all the service I could."

Howes said the only cities previously on routes that were deprived of service following the meeting were Camden, S. C.; Columbia, S. C.; Augusta, Ga.; Duluth, Minn.; Atlantic City, N. J., and Wichita Falls, Tex.

"Would you recommend similar meetings in the future?" Austin asked.

"I thought the meeting was beneficial," Howes said.

"Lobbyists Like Grasshoppers"

Howes was asked if he had been called upon by lobbyists.

"There were hosts of them," he said. "They came in clouds like grasshoppers."

Howes was then questioned concerning events leading up to cancellation of mail contracts. He said cancellation was first recommended by Karl A. Crowley, solicitor for the Postoffice Department. He said Farley took the suggestion to President Roosevelt and that the President referred him to the Attorney General. He said the contracts were canceled by Farley with the approval of the President, but that he knew of no order from the President telling Farley to cancel the contracts.

Howes admitted that air-mail service "has not been as good" since the contracts were canceled.

The committee expects to examine Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General, today.

Meanwhile, the Postoffice Department prepared to open the bids for 90-day contracts on 21 mail routes. The bids will be received only from companies that have been reorganized since cancellation of the contracts. They will indicate the number of contracting companies that have been reorganized and the prices at which they are willing to carry the mail. If the contracts are satisfactory, air-mail operation will return at least temporarily to private carriers within 30 days.

The Senate air-mail bill still was temporarily sidetracked to make way for sugar legislation. Meanwhile, a bill providing for one-year contracts, for a commission to study air mail and fixing a rate of pay was being drafted by a sub-committee of the House Postoffice Committee.

Cannon Holds Up Shoemaker Plea

24-Hour Delay Granted on Judgment Default.

Failure of Representative Raymond Cannon, Wisconsin, to appear in the District Supreme Court yesterday, resulted in a 24-hour postponement of a hearing on the request of Representative Francis H. Shoemaker, Wisconsin, to have set aside a default verdict gainst him.

Representative Cannon said, it was understood, that he believed he was not to appear until today, and Justice Jennings Bailey accepted that explanation.

Shoemaker was declared a default loser in a suit brought by Charles Newman, taxicab driver, who claimed he had been assaulted by the Representative. The time limit allowed for the filing of Shoemaker's answer expired without an answer being submitted, and attorneys for Newman secured the default judgment.

Port Authority Hits Coast Guard Shift

Norfolk, April 19 (Spl.).—The Virginia Port Authority today went on record as opposing transferring of the Coast Guard or the Coast Guard communication services to the Navy.

It was the opinion that the Coast Guard should operate as an independent arm of the Government's service.

Interference with its service of communication, such as receiving calls from ships in distress, might be impaired or delayed if they had to be relayed to the Coast Guard, it was contended.

CWA Projects Slowed By Program Recess

Danville, Va., April 19 (Spl.).—With no definite assurance when the Federal relief program will become operative, making it possible to continue unfinished CWA projects, the work in some instances is deteriorating, according to Howard Hylton, local project officer.

City Engineer Scott also is concerned over the delay because out of the nine unfinished projects, especially road work, several present a menace to public safety and have to be marked by red lanterns at night. Five hundred people here remain idle pending the transfer of CWA activity to FERA.

Dillinger, 3 Pals Rob Illinois Bank linger if he surrendered. John Rowe, one of the neighbors, is circulating it and many Mooresville and Indianapolis folk were reported to have signed.

Unfairness Charged.

The petition would inform Gov. Paul V. McNutt that Dillinger was given an unfair sentence when first convicted of robbing a grocer.

The senior Dillinger scoffed at reports that his son had "paid big money" to grease his way out of the Crown Point Jail March 3.

"When I was up there I asked John if he needed anything and he told me that if I could spare a $10-bill he would like to have it," said the father. "I asked the sheriff (Mrs. Lillian Holley) if it was all right to give John some money and she said to give it to her and she would see that John got what he wanted.

"'That's right,' said John. 'She'll take good care of me,' and John kind of laughed. It looks to me like they just made things too easy for John up there."

Sheriff Provoked.

That remark provoked Sheriff Holley, from whose custody Dillinger eased his way out with a whittled wooden pistol.

"That," she said, "is a funny attitude for Dillinger's father to take. He wasn't pampered; just the opposite." However, the woman sheriff of Lake County, Ind., had had her fill of that escape business and didn't care to resume the topic.

Anyway, the $10 didn't buy his way out. Sheriff Holley said he bought a couple of shirts with it. He was particular what he wore.

That's what Evelyn Frechette, his sweetheart, was doing at Chicago today. She is going for a trip to St. Paul, to be tried for harboring John in her apartment there. But the Government let her have a day's respite while her sister bought her a new spring outfit.

Origin of Colonial Project Revealed

Denton, Md., April 19 (Spl.).—In connection with the celebration of Maryland's tercentenary, papers have been unearthed by R. Boon Beauchamp which reveal the origin of one of the earliest engineering feats in the American colonies, the construction of Long Marsh Ditch, separating Caroline and Queen Anne Counties.

The ditch has recently come into prominence through Civil Works Administration activities in widening it and preventing the spread of mosquitoes. The ditch was dug and the surrounding area drained in 1738, the documents reveal, when a tract of land was granted by Charles Baron, of Baltimore, to Humphrey Wells, the rest to be paid at the two principal feasts of the year at St. Marys City.

The name of this county seat is revealed by a paper which indicates a certain Henry Denton owned land on the Great Choptank River and that the settlement, known as Pig Point, was renamed in his honor.

Recently-Announced, New, Low Delivered Prices also remain in effect

Washington, D. C., April 20.—The Ford Motor Company has announced that there will be no immediate advance in Ford V-8 prices. Recently announced lower delivered prices also continue without change.

This decision is of vital importance to thousands of people who are considering the purchase of a car this Spring. It means that the Ford car (already occupying a unique position as the only car under $2,000.00 with a V-type, 8-cylinder engine) now becomes an even more outstanding investment in transportation and in motoring pleasure.

Known already to thousands as "The Car Without a Price Class," the Ford V-8 now moves, further than before, into a class by itself.

Nation-wide telegraphic response definitely indicates that Ford, already manufacturing America's fastest-selling car, will have to step up production even higher in April to meet a constantly growing demand for the "Car Without a Price Class."

The Festival.

In the Cherry Blossom Festival lies symbolism that makes an appeal, as strong as it may be illogical, to something dewy-fresh in the hearts of the young, to something lingering in the hearts of the old. Easter holds its hope or its promise of a new life after death. Following Easter, this Washington festival joins the calendar of those world-old and world-wide non-religious festivals which offer the hope of a new life here and now.

Every year, when the snow vanishes and the leaves turn green again, when the gray days go and the glad days arrive, man renews his winter-weakened belief in that offer.

"Love comes laughing up the valleys,
Hand-in-hand with hoyden spring."

Spring is singing outside man's bedroom window in the morning; through the long afternoons, spring's brush is painting pink-and-white the cherry trees. The inanimate earth is, before man's very eyes, in renovation. He tells himself: "Perhaps, this time, after so many failures, man can renew his own life on earth; perhaps, this time, he can repair all the errors of his separate lives, and of his collective existence, as if they had never been. This time the race can start all over again—perhaps."

The Fleet's In.

As opponents of censorship we can not condone Admiral Hugh Rodman's burst of indignation at the striking canvas, "The Fleet's In," which Paul Cadmus, a CWA artist of Greenwich Village, painted for the Public Works of Art project. But in one way his wrath is understandable, for the painting is exceedingly different from most art inspired by the Navy. No fronded palms lift branches to a cloudless sky. No trim, white ships drift lazily on deep blue tropic waters. No slim boys wander through foreign parks, snapping their kodaks at distinguished statues, "seeing the world." It is as far from the life of a sailor, as set forth by the Navy's enlistment bureau, as would be posters showing a seasick oiler.

If the Navy doesn't want this painting it doesn't have to take it. But that is no reason why it should be barred from public view on any "moral" grounds. This is the first hint of censorship that has crept into the admirable administration of the P.W.A.P., and Mr. Edward Bruce, the director, might do well to hang the painting in the exhibition next week, with the sign, "Rejected by the Navy." Merely because a retired admiral objects to a painting, which many will consider remarkably true to life, seems to be no reason to banish it like a Rivera mural.

Admiral Rodman has had a long and distinguished career as a sailor. That does not make him an art critic. The P.W.A.P. show is an art exhibition, not an enlistment bureau for the Navy. The fact that a competent artist has painted some sailors, under the urge of spring, in dalliance with lassies on Riverside drive when the fleet's in, is no reflection upon the enlisted men. In fact it is quite in keeping with the seagoing tradition of that fine old chanty which starts:

As I was a-walking down Hanover street,
Blow the man down, bullies, blow him right down;
A pretty young maiden I chanced to meet, &c.

We leave it to the admiral, or any other good sailor, to supply the rest of the words.

No Isolation.

Advocates of the McLeod bill are picturing an isolated class of ten million deserving citizens with deposits tied up in closed banks. They are visualized as neglected by a government that is distributing bonuses and benefits to many other groups. While farmers, veterans, relief workers and others are receiving loans and outright gifts from the Federal Treasury, the depositors of closed banks are said to be as discriminated against, cut off from the subsidies that have descended upon their more fortunate fellow men.

The contrast between this imaginary society of outcast depositors and the facts is pronounced. Of course many of these depositors are individuals whose unpaid notes repose among the so-called "frozen" assets of closed banks. Many of them are farmers in receipt of bonuses showered upon them by the AAA.

It is not necessary to continue the list. The groups in an organized society are too inter-related to be isolated in such artificial classifications as depositors in closed banks. Muddled thinking and bad policies are the result of our failure to recognize that civilized men do not live in compartments, separated from each other like wandering tribes of Indians.

Fortunately the President and his advisers have taken a firm stand against efforts to stampede the Government into making good the losses of a group of people to whom in their capacity as depositors in private banks the Government can not properly be held financially responsible.

A Loan For The District.

With the indorsement of the District Commissioners, a bill asking authority to borrow $20,000,000 from the PWA for public works in Washington has been laid before the Senate and House District Committees. In thus seeking to borrow money for municipal improvements the Commissioners have made a grave decision.

At present the District has no debt. Interest charges and debt amortization, which at present absorb from 25 to 50 per cent of the tax receipts in many cities, are unknown in our local government. In 310 American cities municipal debts amounted to nearly $200 per capita in 1931. Since that time they have increased while the value of property and family incomes have substantially declined. Dozens of American cities face bankruptcy because of extravagant fiscal policies in the past. It is essential that Washington should continue to avoid the primrose path of debt accumulation down which so many other communities have carelessly wandered.

On the other hand, essential improvements have been neglected in the budgets of the last few years. The need for new schools, libraries, health facilities, &c., has become acute. Other cities throughout the country have been urged to borrow money from the PWA to finance projects of this kind. Along with the loans the Federal Government is granting 30 per cent of the cost of labor and materials to cities and States undertaking projects to create employment. No city in America is in better financial position to take advantage of this offer than is Washington. Certainly, if there is any justification whatever for the Federal public works program, loans to the District for essential improvements may be considered sound policy.

Arrangements would be made for repayment of 70 per cent of the $20,000,000 in yearly installments. These would be automatically deducted from the District budget. Since Congress has control of Washington's purse there appears to be no possibility that the loan contemplated would become the first step toward a burdensome municipal debt. The tendency is for Congress to lean in the opposite direction, denying to the District sufficient funds to extend community service in keeping with our increasing population, as was indicated by the unreasonable action of the House yesterday on the District appropriations bill. Instead of flowing into needed improvements, surplus local revenue has been used to reduce the Federal contribution to the National Capital. An obligation on the part of the District to repay a loan from the PWA might reverse this tendency and encourage the adjustment of fiscal relations between the Capital and the Federal Treasury on a more equitable basis.

The Commissioners' proposal might well be considered from the viewpoint of an investment. If the District can secure funds in this way taxpayers will save 30 per cent of the cost of improvements. Of course, large sums might be wasted under this plan if a construction program should be launched merely to create jobs. But if only sound and essential projects are included an actual saving to the District is possible. Obviously, the projects to be thus financed should be chosen with the greatest care. In this respect the Commissioners have assumed a formidable responsibility.

When hearings on the bill are conducted the list of projects contemplated ought to be again scrutinized. Certainly that provision giving the Commissioners authority to transfer funds to the Park and Planning Commission ought to be eliminated. Funds for the purchase of park sites may be obtained through the Capper-Cramton Act. There appears to be no reason why that careful plan for development of Washington's parks should be confused with the projects now in question. Nor can any move to subordinate the Park and Planning Commission to the District Commissioners be regarded with favor. If this bill is to be enacted, it should be confined to urgent requirements that can not be financed by any other practical means.

Seeing Error Without A Trial.

One of the more startling of the projects contemplated in connection with the New Deal appears to be happily out of the picture. A few months ago there was glib talk of transplanting a million families from their present homes to more promising economic environment. Now Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief administrator, admits that the program has encountered difficulties that portend defeat before it gets under way.

The "human transplantation" scheme has been frustrated by the common sense of the people who would have been affected by the experiment. They have simply refused to leave their homes to participate in uncertain ventures which held out little hope of more economic security than they now possess. Fortunately, Mr. Hopkins has recognized this obvious reaction to a half-baked plan before the Government had a chance to waste a large sum of money on it. That official says:

> The more I see of this, the more I think that these people have got to be given some kind of economic adjustment where they are. We have investigated every "stranded population" in the country and the more I see of it, all the more difficult it becomes . . . They don't want to be moved.

No other outcome should have been expected. But under the doctrines of economic planning the considerations of common sense often play a subordinate part. The usual procedure is to get a big idea; to announce it as a panacea; to establish a Federal agency to work it out; to staff the agency with political appointees; and then to try something new when the scheme flops. In the words of the President, "If one method does not succeed, another method will be tried."

It was apparent from the beginning that the "human transplantation" scheme on any large scale was an absurdity. If the Administration could create new opportunities to make a livelihood, it would not need to worry about moving people into the favored area. Measures to avoid migrations comparable to the gold rushes of past years would more likely be necessary. In this instance, however, there is something for which to be thankful. The method suggested was given analysis, and dropped, before instead of after trial.

Gathering Shadows.

Almost simultaneously, from Tokyo and from London, have come official pronouncements which remind us forcibly of the instability of the surface which supports our civilization. The message from Tokyo, while not yet an ultimatum, can only be regarded as a thinly veiled threat of renewed aggression against China, couched in terms which show little respect for treaty obligations in the Far East. The message from London is in the form of a government "White Paper," summarizing the discouraging results of disarmament negotiations and breathing between its lines no little apprehension for the continued maintenance of peace in Europe.

Between these two documents there is perhaps a closer connection than meets the eye. It is not merely that in the integrated world of today political tremors pass rapidly from country to country and from continent to continent, so that no capital can be indifferent to major political shocks elsewhere. It is also true that Europe's crisis has come to be Japan's opportunity to play a lone hand. This was made clear when the conquest of Manchuria was launched in 1931. It is equally true today.

He would indeed be blind who would argue that the machinery of international cooperation is strong enough in itself to prevent the dangers whose shadows lengthen over a distraught and nervous world. Responsibility for the maintenance of peace, which once could be said to focus at Geneva, is now again divided between the capitals of the great powers, including Washington. Since it is largely due to great-power policies that this is the case, the responsibility resting on their statesmen is intensified.

There are no problems at issue between the nations of the world today which could not be solved by processes of negotiation. There are none which are likely to be solved according to plans or hopes by applying the crude arbitrament of force. If we are really unable to look back 20 years, and to improve upon the fatal policy of drift then dominant, the cynics may have more than ample justification for their belief in man's inability to control his destiny.

Good Reason For Delay.

The House has not yet acted upon the bill passed by the Senate at the end of February providing for an extension of the temporary deposit-insurance plan for a year from next July. The chairman of the board of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has pointed out in an address before the American Bankers Association the importance of Congressional action to defer introduction of the permanent system. It would be impossible, he says, to examine all the member banks between now and July with a view to determining their solvency, hence their eligibility for participation in the permanent plan. In addition, investigations have to be made into the condition of nonmember banks adhering to the guaranty system.

Apart from these insurmountable practical difficulties, however, the basic defects of the deposit-guaranty plan make it highly desirable to defer the date of transition from the present temporary system to the permanent one. That will give Congress an opportunity to reconsider its hasty action in approving a guaranty plan that puts a premium upon irresponsible banking practices, and imposes unlimited liabilities upon insured institutions. There will also be time in which to devise legislation to correct those fundamental weaknesses of our uncoordinated dual banking system which have contributed largely to our bank failures.

In the absence of constructive legislation, the country can not escape a recurrence of bank closings. Introduction of a system of deposit guaranty which invites relaxation of customary restraints upon bank managements would make future disturbances even more devastating than those that lie behind us.

A national weekly says the country is being run by amateurs. Even so, that's an improvement—just look what the professionals did to it!

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

GEN. HUERTA "insulted" the United States when he demanded a written pledge for a return salute. President Wilson prepared to ask Congress for money and authority to use armed force to "uphold the honor" of the United States. Gen. Wood was appointed to command the army of invasion and orders were sent to the American battleships off Tampico to prepare for action.

ADDRESSING a meeting of the International Workers' Defense League, William D. ("Big Bill") Haywood said a signal for war by the President would mean a general strike in the country's coal mines.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

SENATOR LADD, of North Dakota, said that through the rapid growth and progress of this country the farmer had lost at practically every step. This recalled to him that at one time the farmers in Rome quit tilling the soil and the government had to operate the farms. He said it seemed history was repeating itself.

LADY FRANCES BALFOUR condemned the young women of the day as being much inferior to the old-fashioned girls in point of morals, intelligence, romance and knowledge of the great affairs of life.

Cherry Blossoms and Japan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To your interesting city I have traveled many miles to view the blossoming cherry trees presented to the Government, during the Taft Administration, by the Mayor of Tokyo. Their delicate fragrance, their ethereal beauty, create a charm which, every year, draws increasing thousands of visitors. It is a spectacle of unusual loveliness, but to me, as no doubt to many others, it is something more—it is the gracious and significant symbol of the friendliness of the Japanese people toward the people of the United States. I know of nothing comparable to it elsewhere in our country.

Since the day when Commodore Perry knocked so loudly at the doors of Japan, bidding her take her place in the international family circle, her relationship to the United States has been particularly close, as well as unique. Sentiment and self-interest both have operated to bind the two nations together. She is, today, one of our most valuable customers. It should be remembered that during the World War Japan was a powerful ally.

I am among those who believe that the historic friendship between the two nations will be proof against every assault that baseless fear or imperfect understanding may make against it. It is, therefore, with a lively sense of appreciation that, as I view the cherry blossoms, I bow in the direction of Tokyo and send a wafture of cordial good will to our good friends and transpacific neighbors, the people of Japan.

Cruelty to Animals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am glad there are a few merciful individuals in the world like Virginia Sargent to offset the almost daily story that we are obliged to read of some sort of cruelty practiced by human beings in the name of sport, medical science, profits or amusements upon the defenseless so-called "lower" animals who are in their power.

The recent revolting tale of Maxine Elliot and her pet monkey has not even one of the above alleged justifications. The unfortunate creature bit its owner, probably because it was suffering some pain or distress which it had no way of imparting, and instead of having it chloroformed the dumb, defenseless little animal was tortured by having its teeth drawn.

Why in the name of reason and compassion do humans insist upon dragging poor jungle creatures out of their native habitats and then imposing their own laws upon their wretched, uncomprehending victims?

Truly man's inhumanity to man is exceeded only by his myriad forms of cruelty perpetrated upon those over whom he has dominion and who should therefore have his merciful protection.

Old Age Pensions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nothing is more pathetic in my estimation than the many gray-haired, decrepit-looking men and women still working exerywhere in banks and stores long after they should be in retirement, but forced because of poverty to still toil on. We see these "brave old warriors" everywhere today, concealing under a mantle of dignity and bravado their tired-out bodies and the infirmities which old age has put upon them. Many apparently have no son or daughter to look out for them so they are continuing the daily grind to the ages of 70 and even 75, which is inhuman. The human body is like a machine which in time becomes obsolete and worn out and needs rest and it is cruel that society does not give old age pensions to people over 70, who have been unable to save sufficient for their old age. I am young and vigorous myself, but often feel saddened at the sight of aged people still in the harness and still "poor wage slaves," at 70 or over. A few years in which to enjoy a needed rest before they pass on and to enjoy the sunset of their lives in peace of mind free from the necessity of toiling daily would be a blessing to many of these courageous but frail individuals.

Humane Week.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Be kind to animals week" is here and, as usual, where an annual event is on, enthusiasm reaches its heights.

With the Washington Animal Rescue League, which has comfortable headquarters at 71 O street northwest, enthusiastic work for suffering animals reaches a high-water mark every day in the year, for there is never a day but that sick, suffering, helpless and homeless creatures are gathered in and tenderly cared for.

The pity is that so many people fail to appreciate the amount of suffering which exists among our dumb friends. If all realized it, humane education would be thoroughly exploited in our schools, Sunday schools, churches and homes, until both parents and children would be kind and considerate to all animals, especially the dog and cat, which have become part of our family life.

Most people with whom the league comes in contact cooperate in the work in every way possible, but a few of the unthinking imagine that a ring at the telephone will bring the league ambulance as quickly as would a call to the fire department. The league can afford to maintain but one car and that car is on the road every day from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. Therefore it is as impossible to go at a moment's notice as it is for a busy doctor to rush at once to a call.

The league does the best it can. Its telephone rarely is silent ten minutes of the day. Therefore we ask the public to be patient and to understand that it bothers us as much as it does the person who telephones to be obliged to say that the ambulance is out collecting animals which already had been reported in distress, and the caller must take his turn.

No better or more practical method of expressing one's love for a living or lost pet can be found than by helping to rescue the pitiful animal waifs of Washington.

"Soaking" the Stockholder.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Where does a certain element in this country justify its position continually criticizing stockholders of American corporations? Labor must come ahead of stockholders is a typical utterance. Why?

There are millions of stockholders in this country whose right to a dividend is just as great as the right of workers to wages. There have been hundreds of corporations employing workers and paying them good wages, while the stockholders of the same companies have been in actual need because their dividends have been stopped.

There seems to be a feeling in some circles in America, where education should teach otherwise, that an average American stockholder is very rich and needs to be "soaked." This might have been true years ago, but it is not true now. Investing in stock is just as common as putting money in a building loan and there is no reason why a stock investor should not be accorded the same measure of protection.

The trouble with the millions of small stockholders in this country is that they are not organized, so their own officials mulct their companies by extracting high salaries and bonuses from them, and then Congress in its "all seeing" wisdom cracks down on the little fellows with legislation that takes another slice.

Congress and Veterans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To the critics who maintain that those members of Congress who are supporting the Patman so-called bonus bill, and other veterans' legislation, are doing so with only a thought of the approaching elections, I should like to quote the following from the careful, conservative Wall Street Journal:

"There is evidence enough to support the theory that the House voted as it did mainly because a large majority of Representatives believe the veterans are as rightly entitled to a substantial benefit out of the public purse as the farmers are to be paid to reduce their exertions, or as CWA workers to be supported in exchange for nonessential work, or Tennessee Valley inhabitants to buy electric equipment at bargain prices on the Government-financed installment plan, or as Virgin Islanders to get rent-purchase allotments of land and working capital to set them up as cane growers, or as home or farm mortgagors to shift their obligations into the hands of a more paternal creditor."

Post Travel Lectures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I greatly enjoyed the Travel Lectures, especially the lectures on India and Russia. I believe that an American can lecture better on a foreign country than a native of that country, for an American can emphasize what interested him from the American viewpoint.

I enjoy The Post greatly.

China and Silver.

China has apparently decided to follow the United States in ratifying the silver agreement drawn up at the World Economic Conference in July, 1933. It is reported, however, that China's ratification will be qualified by a reservation enabling her to withdraw from the agreement if its object, i. e., the stabilization of the price of silver, is disregarded by other countries. This reservation is evidently a hint to the advocates of a high price of silver in the United States.

It is not difficult to understand China's attitude on the silver problem, for a pronounced rise in the world price of silver would have disastrous consequences for China. Chinese imports would no doubt be stimulated for a time, but, as internal prices would rise, the increase in imports would have to be paid for by silver. Unless China gave up the silver standard she would experience all the hardships of deflation. Further, since she would be unable to maintain, let alone increase, her imports of silver, the world's silver problem would in the long run only be aggravated, as its ultimate solution depends largely on a revival of Eastern demand.

It may be possible to raise the gold price of silver for a time at the expense of deflation in China, but the increase in prices would lead to a rise in production and supplies, with a consequent collapse in prices and renewed dislocation in China.

The Post Impressionist

Those Links With Greatness.

Postoffice, Friday.

Some odd echoes have been roused by our production of men who knew men who saw Lafayette and Napoleon. There is a literary person with a young novelist friend in Virginia whose not-old mother heard Revolutionary War reminiscences from the lips of a Revolutionary veteran. There are notes on another Napoleonic contact. There is the amazing Mystery of the Little Brother. . . .

"It must be interesting," writes a correspondent, "to know men who saw great men now long dead; but have you ever considered how it may affect a living man to 'remind' his friends of some prominent personage?

"During the Spanish War, there was working in a Philadelphia office with me a clean-shaven fellow whom I'll call Brown and whose sole marked characteristic was an antipathy for salt-water.

"Well, one day a fellow-clerk looked up from a newspaper photograph of Admiral Sampson and said: 'Why, Brown, I can see by this that, if you grew whiskers and got into a uniform, everybody on Chestnut Street would mistake you for Sampson!'

"As soon as he could, Brown grew the suggested beard, which happened to be of the right color, and trimmed it to the shape of the Admiral's. A month later, he was wearing a double-breasted blue coat, a white yachting-cap and duck trousers. His talk was full of nautical terms. As far as I heard, he never went to sea, but he soon grew too important for our office and left it, on request of the boss.

"My second instance is Washingtonian—and George Washingtonian. During the Washington Bi-Centennial year, there lived in my street here a tall, raw-boned man with a wide, hairless upper-lip. He was a modest bank-clerk and he was married to a simple Norwegian girl from Minnesota.

"I had never before thought he resembled the Father of his Country. But somebody told him he did—and he began to! Upon this, other people spoke to him about it, whereat the likeness grew undeniable. It was not only that he adopted square-toed low-shoes and a bow-tie as near to a stock as might be: the idea actually impressed itself upon his face. I needn't add that he began to talk like an old-fashioned copy-book, to read Bancroft and buy Colonial furniture and Washington prints.

"He lost interest in the bank, so the bank lost interest in him. He moved out of our street, and I haven't seen him lately, but I hear he has divorced his first wife and, through sheer force of that resemblance, has won the hand—and I hope the heart—of a rich D. A. R."

Now for the Napoleonic repercussion:

"There are hundreds of people still living who knew Laurence Hutton, the critic, of Harper's Magazine," says our Bonapartist authority. "Hutton had an enormous aequaintance and died in 1904. Yet, about thirty years before that, there called on him in New York an Englishman who said he had seen Napoleon I—an Englishman who seemed less than forty years old.

"Hutton had never seen this caller before, but he brought a letter from some London friend of the critic. The host, who was a bit of a collector of historic trifles, began to show his treasures. Among these was a sketch, made from life, of the great Bonaparte.

"The Englishman nodded approval. 'Yes,' he said, 'this looks very like Napoleon as I saw him.'

"Hutton did some rapid mental-arithmetic. Napoleon had been dead for about fifty-three years. The treasure-exhibition closed forthwith. In either the matter of common honesty or brain-health, there must be something wrong with this fellow! It was to be hoped he'd go, but he showed no hurry. The host ordered tea. Once he tactfully edged the conversation around to ages; the caller said he was just forty—and changed the topic.

"He didn't come back to it till, after many delays, he rose to leave. Then, quite casually, he said:

"'Perhaps I ought to explain something. When I was a little codger, five or six years old, my father was attached to the British Embassy at Paris. That would be while Louis Philippe was king, wouldn't it? Anyway, it was the December of 1840, when the body of Napoleon I was brought home from St. Helena and buried at the Invalides.

"'Well, in France as in most places, exhumed bodies of important people have to be officially identified before reburial, and there must be witnesses to the identification. The British Embassy was asked to send a witness or two. My father was one and, as he thought it would be something for me to remember, he took me.

"'The body was very life-like.'"

Our latest echo is not concerned with historic folk, but it does go back pretty far. We quote a letter:

"Seven years ago, I met a man of sixty who said to me, 'My little brother, three years old, was drowned in a keg of molasses.' When I agreed that this was a strange manner of quitting life, my new acquaintance added: 'Yes, but the date of my little brother's death is interesting, too—in view of the fact that he was my brother. The date was 1820.'

"It seems that the father was thrice married and had seventeen children. The eldest, this 'little brother,' was born when the father was twenty-one years old; my acquaintance, the youngest, was born in 1867."

Well, it is only a few weeks since the always veracious newspapers reported a son born to a sprightly father of 79, at Radburn, N. J.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

TO those who just simply refuse to get wrought up or concerned over the steadily increasing encroachment upon our liberties I should like to commend the matter of the short wave radio sets which the police use. The operation of these things, it seems to me, are not only jeopardizing cherished liberties but our privacy as well.

Seldom is there a day that one does not hear the police bellowing the domestic infelicities and misdeeds of our citizens all over town. I may be different, but it gives me no kick at all to be walking down the street and hear one of those scout cars airing the fact that Mrs. Smith has just socked Mr. Smith on the jaw. I hold that the pleasantries of Mr. and Mrs. Smith are peculiarly a matter between them.

BARGERON.

* * * *

The rankest airing of our personal affairs, however, I heard only yesterday afternoon.

"Scout Car No. 14," the radio barked, "go to a house at blank, blank W street. A man is drunk in his room. Scout Car No. 14, go to," &c., and on the thing went, reiterating time after time that at a house on W street a man was drunk in his room.

All of the town's scout cars were, of course, not within my immediate view, but I know very well what happened. They all took up the chatter like a bunch of gossiping old women. All over town, wherever there was a short wave set, the fact that on W street a man was drunk in his room was being loudly hawked.

I can see Scout Car No. 14 turning on its heels and setting off gleefully and all the other little scout cars racing from every direction to see this man who was drunk in his room in a house on W street. I suppose wandering motorists, too, joined in the carnival. Here was fun.

* * * *

Now I suppose that the very reason this man got drunk in his room on W street was because he did not want to be seen. Had he wanted to be seen, it is quite plain to me, he would have gone to one of our night clubs.

Just why he was not permitted to go into his room and get drunk without the police talking about it in their loud radio voice so that all the town could hear and then rushing to see him and inviting the populace to follow is something I can't understand.

The thought occurred to me at first that this house on W street must have been one of those on which the Government had taken a mortgage and for which it therefore felt a responsibility. But I was wrong. A careful check-up proves that it was financed solely by private capital, that it is one of the few remaining enterprises with which the Government has absolutely nothing to do.

* * * *

My investigation further disclosed that is was an ideal room in which to get drunk, that it lent itself readily to a good old-fashioned crackerjack orgy. I imagine that this man was a methodical person, that he went about his drunks with a careful planning. I can see him, as he was arranging for this drunk, surveying the wall paper, the protected window so that in case he got the hebejeebes there would be no opportunity for him to jump out. I can see how he contemplated his approaching spree and with every intake of breath observed inwardly how he hated it.

And then to have it shouted from the housetops! Well, it just doesn't seem fair.

It could not have been that the Government had any complaint with his getting drunk in his room. There has, as yet, come down no decree directing that we get drunk in the park. There may be one in the near future, of course—an order saying that we must all get drunk in the park so the brain trusters can study us. But such is not the law now.

Frankly, I believe that, in this instance, it was just a plain case of our Government being garrulous.

TO TROUT IN A STORE WINDOW.

Speckled beauties in that pool
Made by window-dresser's hand,
Looking anything but cool,
Feeling something less than grand—
What are your reactions to Public curiosity?
Do you get a laugh as you
Note the faces that you see?

II.

Tell me, startled little trout,
Do you wonder in your way
What the heck it's all about
Through the noisy city day?
Does the hubbub and the noise
Of a great metropolis
Rag your nerves and shake your poise—
Make you sigh for woodland bliss?

III.

Do you hear the buses shriek—
Do you get the street car's roar—
Do you hear the brakes that squeak—
From your brooklet in a store?
As the city's crowds surge by
Pausing now and then to stare,
Giving you the beady eye,
Do you mind, or don't you care?

IV.

Does that handmade cascade there
From a hidden water pipe
Fool you, or are you aware
It is just a lot of tripe?
Do you think the mossy bank
At your side a thing of joy,
Or are you too smart to rank
Such stuff as the real McCoy?

V.

Do you mind the city nights
And the bedlam near and far?
Are you bothered by the lights
And the roar of motor car?
Are you very much distressed—
Are you frightened badly when
'Gainst the window pane are pressed
Noses of Big Business Men?

VI.

Do you find your life a bore,
Far from any wooded nooks
In the springtime in a store
With the latest fishing books?
Or am I all wrong? I wish
I were not so free with plty . . .

Cummings Pleads Law's Supremacy

Attorney General Talks at Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., April 18 (AP).—How to bring administration into balance with law and subject administration to law's supremacy was termed by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings last night as the "immediate question with which our people must deal."

The Attorney General, delivering the last of his series of three lectures before the University of Virginia School of Law, said that "from primitive times down through the centuries, the race has fought against despotism and arbitrary power and struggled to bring regulation into a just relationship to liberty."

He said that "the product of these hard-fought battles" has been the establishment of "the supremacy of law. Nothing can be tolerated that robs us of this."

To Primitive Man the Tree Was a Place to Roost

By Robert Quillen

If you were one of a ship's company marooned on a little island in the midst of the sea, what would be your first concern?

You would do your utmost to provide food and water and shelter for all of the company.

Having made sure of these necessities, you would cooperate with your fellows in making the island a better place to live.

You would kill the snakes and dig up the poisonous plants. You would lay out pathways and clear them of stones. To the best of your ability, you would make the place beautiful and sanitary.

And since all of you were equal in misfortune, you would share equally both the toil and its rewards. There would be no competition or selfish claiming of advantages, for in time of great misfortune these things are considered poor sportsmanship.

Well, we are all marooned on this earth—brought here without our consent, doomed to remain as fellow unfortunates until Death comes to our rescue.

Why are we less noble than we would be on the island?

Simple logic, common sense, selflessness, prudence, justice and common decency urge us to make this world a better place to live.

For thousands of years our race has labored to improve material things for the sake of gain, but never yet has it had the wit to unite in the simple and obviously necessary business of making the world a good place for all of us.

There are no more continents to discover; no more worlds to conquer; no more great adventures. Yet the ablest and best can find a task suited to their abilities. They can plan a new kind of civilization to make the earth a pleasant place for all.

There is abundance for everybody. In Heaven's name let us untangle this complicated mess and give mankind a chance to enjoy living.

Colthurst Named Albemarle Justice

Will Serve 4-Year Term Under New Law.

Charlottesville, April 19 (Spl.).—William B. Colthurst, resident of Albemarle County for 40 years and a magistrate in the Charlottesville district for four years, today was appointed county trial justice to take over the work now being done by 15 to 18 magistrates. He will assume office for a four-year term on July 1, with a salary of $1,800 per annum.

In announcing the appointment, Judge Lemuel Smith pointed out that Mr. Colthurst had tried more cases than all the other magistrates together. He said he plans to order the trial court to sit here and at Crozet and Scottsville.

Mr. Colthurst, a native of England, came to this country in 1893 and established his home on a farm in the community of Georgetown near here. He maintains an office in Charlottesville.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Francis Richard Stockton.

This month of April is the centenary of the birth of our beloved American novelist, Frank Stockton. He was born at Philadelphia in April, 1834, and died at Washington April 20, 1902.

His centennial is being celebrated at Yale University by an undergraduate exhibition of first editions and manuscripts, all owned by undergraduates; and by a memorial address.

Frank Stockton's formal education ceased on his graduation from the high school. Like so many writers, he was an accomplished artist, being a wood engraver of great skill. He wrote regularly for the Philadelphia newspapers and for American magazines; and in 1873 he became assistant editor of St. Nicholas.

He wrote many books for children, which were immensely popular from 1870 to 1880, and which are now almost forgotten. His fame began with his novel "Rudder Grange," which first appeared in 1879, and by its whimsical humor and originality captivated thousands of readers. The years from 1879 to 1889 were his most fruitful. In 1884 he produced a short story called "The Lady or the Tiger," which became known everywhere in America and Great Britain for the challenging enigma of its conclusion. The title indeed has become proverbial; so that whenever the end of any story is left in doubt, we call it a lady or tiger ending.

His fame was heightened by the magnificent novel, "The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine," which has a humor and charm all its own.

During the nineties, there was a great revival of romantic stories of adventure. One of the very best and most exciting yarns of that whole period was Frank Stockton's novel, "The Adventures of Captain Horn," which appeared in 1895. It naturally does not have the standing in literature of some of his earlier works, but for those who enjoy a thrilling tale of adventure, I heartily recommend "Captain Horn."

The personality of Frank Stockton was as charming as his books; he was intensely beloved.

Price Increase Aids Maryland Dairy Farmers

Pennsylvania Code Rate Affects Washington County Group.

Hagerstown, Md., April 19 (Spl.).—Increases in the prices paid for milk shipped into Pennsylvania through the Farmers Protective Association milk plant at Greencastle have been announced by the Pennsylvania Milk Control Board. About 150 Washington County farmers will be benefited by the increases.

The F. P. A. plant ships milk collected from farmer members of the association to the Hershey Co., which has accepted the code price.

The new code provides for a price of $1.70 per 100 pounds for 3.5 per cent milk, and $1.90 for 4 per cent milk, against a former price of $1.60 per 100.

Milk producers selling locally are expected to cause local distributors to bring their prices up to the code price. Some dealers here were reported by producers to be paying far under the old price paid to producers serving the F. P. A. plant.

A group of raw milk dealers here refused to abide by the code price of 11 cents a quart several months ago, and continued to sell for 8 cents, forcing the pasteurized plants here to reduce beneath the code price. As a result distributors reduced the price paid the producer.

Some farmers have indicated they would endeavor to force the hand of the distributors in an effort to bring the raw and pasteurizing companies together on a price that would be fair both to the consumers and themselves.

Other producers here feel the local milk situation will rectify itself now that an agreement has been reached on the Pennsylvania price. About 500 Washington County farmers ship milk into Pennsylvania. Most of this goes to Philadelphia.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

JOHN DOS PASSOS' one weapon seems to be a withering and wordy irony. Flourishing it over Russia, Spain, Mexico and certain parts of the United States, he gives us a volume of politico-sociological travel notes—"In All Countries" (Harcourt-Brace, $2.50). Few other authors could have laid down their dusty knapsacks and written with such scenic brilliance, and few other authors would have brought back so meager a message—that the whole world is going to pot. But perhaps Dos Passos is right.

THEO. HALL.

At least he harps endlessly upon the point, always with the same ingrained ironies, gross or delicate. Russia did not please him. Waiting to leave it was "like waiting for the cage that's going to haul you up out of a mine . . . like climbing the long greasy ladder out of the stokehold of a steamboat, like getting away from the rotary presses of a newspaper and stepping out into the disorganized jingling street." But he was glad to step.

He speaks of the "vivid and sometimes scary freedom of the Russian mind. . . . Living in reality is a strain the human race has always done its best to avoid, so it is not surprising that Russians come up to you and ask you wistfully if Wiesbaden is as pleasant as it used to be." No, there was nothing in Russia he could like for long, not even the theater. As a writer, he felt too much apart from that bleak conscientiousness.

* * * *

Mexico showed him 10,000,000 peasants, "disunited, confused . . . standing up in their fields against the Catholic Church, against the two world groups of petroleum interests, against the inconceivably powerful financial bloody juggernaut of the Colossus of the North." That hopelessness was bitter on his tongue.

From Spain he had the impression of "well-meaning liberals and social democrats helplessly 'contemplating with horror' the collapse of the very civilized life they prize so highly."

* * * *

Dos Passos then trots out some old '25 and '26 essays on the Passaic strikes and the Sacco-Vanzetti case—they are shafted and barbed with irony. The bonus march on Washington, the Republican, Democratic, Socialist and Communist conventions of 1932, an NRA code hearing, press conferences with the President and Gen. Johnson, a visit to the Capitol—these he watches, seeing nothing but pretense and smugness. Underneath, his constant inference cries out, smolders the volcano. Beware the wrath to come!

I do not doubt Dos Passos' social sympathy. But I do doubt that a book like this, however passionately written, can be anything else but brittle. That's the irony of it.

* * * *

After describing the subconscious way in which he wrote it—"for some reason I was so sure of what I was doing that I did not read what I was writing"—he makes one very good point about the book:

"So far it seems that its readers have mainly been those seeking sensation and pornography, I would willingly trade 10,000 of those for a hundred readers among the boys and girls with whom I walked barefooted to school in snow-crusted Tennessee winters and with whom I sweated through the summer nights in the mills of Georgia."

That needs to be said, with a little more emphasis, perhaps, on the fact that if a reader seeks straight pornography he can find dozens of better examples. This tale purges like Greek tragedy. Indeed, it is almost too classic, too sharp in its passionate rise and fall. There is a whole world in this apparently simple, apparently sordid story of old Ty Walden, digging half-crazily for gold on his South Carolina farm and respecting himself all the while, and of his sons and daughters, hating, fighting and loving. It is an affirmation of man and the passion of man in a world which deludes or oppresses. Caldwell's writing stands equal to that theme.

The three maids of honor will be Miss Harvey Seward, of Petersburg; Miss Julia Jackson Preston, of Charlotte, N. C., and Miss Marguerite Louise Christian, of Washington, both of whom are great-granddaughters of Stonewall Jackson. There will also be a resident staff that has not been selected.

On Gen. Atkinson's personal military staff will be Lieut. Gen. Harry Rene Lee, of Nashville, Ky., chief of staff; Mrs. W. B. Bookkeeper Due In Relief Bureau

Will Guard Against Debts in Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va., April 19 (Spl.).—In order to guard against the possibility that local relief agencies might incur debts beyond their appropriations, L. McCarthy Downs, State Auditor of Public Accounts, will place a bookkeeper in the office of the Roanoke Social Service Bureau next week, city authorities have been notified.

Mr. Downs explained that his office recently took over the bookkeeping for the Emergency Relief Administration.

William A. Smith, State Emergency Relief Administrator, has been represented to authorities here as feeling that the City of Roanoke is not contributing enough to relief activities. The State administration allotted $23,000 this week for relief purposes in Roanoke, and is requesting that the city provide a larger contribution.

Allegany Tax Raised 5 Cents

$87,566 Rise in Budget Lifts County Levy to $1.25.

Cumberland, Md., April 19 (Spl.).—Allegany County's tax rate for the next fiscal year will be $1.25 on each $100 of assessed valuation, according to the annual levy list completed by the board of Allegany County commissioners. The rate last year was $1.20.

The 5-cent increase results from increased appropriations for public schools, election expenses and mothers' and old-age pensions, which are mandatory under acts of the Legislature. The aggregate budget of the county schools is $7,279 more than last year, but the commissioners were obliged to levy $41,050.65 more because the schools will receive less from the State than last year.

The aggregate appropriation for 1934 is $1,189,885.46, an increase of $87,566.06 over last year's budget. The total increase of $110,662.61 is offset by decreases amounting to $23,096.55. The board appropriated $15,000 for old-age pensions and $7,600 for mothers' pensions, conforming to the acts of the Legislature.

The State tax rate is fixed by law at 22 cents for the ensuing fiscal year. With the county rate at $1.25, the total rate is $1.47 on each $100. The total State and county rate last year was $1.45.

The taxable basis of the county was listed in the levy as $76,000,000. It was estimated that liquor licenses will add $10,000 to the county treasury and the State roads commission will give $100,000 for road building and maintenance.

Dozing a 'Grand' Sensation; Awoke to Find $1,000 at Hand

But Betting Commissioner Still Faces Counterfeit Passing Charge.

Baltimore, April 19 (Spl.).—Awakening on a Pennsylvania Railroad special race-track train to find a package on the seat beside him containing nearly $1,000 in new greenbacks did not surprise J. A. Libby, of Brooklyn, N. Y., he related today.

Libby had been expecting something of the sort, he told United States Commissioner Supplee. It was just his mysterious employer's way of getting the money to him.

Libby was arraigned on charges of possessing counterfeit money. His explanation began by recounting that a man identified by Libby as "Joe Saturae," of Chicago, hired him as a "betting commissioner." Libby, the story continued, was instructed to go to Bowie and bet the horses according to instructions from the mysterious Joe.

A salary of $200 a week and expenses went with the job, Libby testified. He boarded a train and when he found the money beside him he accepted it merely as one of his employer's vagaries and proceeded to bet the money at Bowie.

But Federal operatives arrested him at the track on charges of passing counterfeit bills. In his room in Baltimore they reported finding $820 more in spurious notes.

Libby said he didn't know the notes were counterfeit, but the commissioner raised his bail from $5,000 to $15,000, and held him for the action of the Federal grand jury.

Fete Queen's Gift Recalls History

Key to Be Made of Wood From Fort Loudoun.

Winchester, Va., April 19 (AP).—When Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Upperville, Va., is crowned queen of the apple blossom festival here she will receive, among other gifts, a key carved from wood hewn by soldiers under George Washington.

The logs were used in construction of Fort Loudoun, an outpost guarding early settlers from Indian raids, in 1755. John W. Nail, Winchester sculptor, obtained pieces of the wood and has carved symbolic keys for nine festival queens.

Nail believes he is the only person who has wood from the old fort and has refused several large offers for it.

All Virginians In House Due To Enter Race

Primary Deadline June 8; Byrd Must Defend Senate Seat.

Richmond, April 19 (AP).—Capitol Hill politicians are predicting that all members of the Virginia delegation in the United States House of Representatives, and Senator Harry F. Byrd, will be candidates for renomination this year.

It is expected that eight of the nine members of the House delegation will participate in the Democratic primary August 7. Representative John W. Flannagan, of the Ninth District, already has been nominated by convention.

Whether the others will have opposition has not yet been disclosed. While thus far, only Representative Andrew Jackson Montague, dean of the House group from Virginia, has formally announced, opposition to none of the Representatives has been revealed.

M. A. Hutcheson, executive secretary of the State central Democratic Committee, today said the filing deadline for candidates for nomination to the House of Representatives is June 8.

In the cases of candidates for nomination for the House of Representatives, the aspirants file with the party chairmen of their respective districts.

The House incumbents are S. O. Bland, First District; Colgate W. Darden, Second District; A. J. Montague, Third District; Patrick Drewry, Fourth District; T. G. Burch, Fifth District; C. A. Woodrum, Sixth District; A. Willis Robertson, Seventh District; Howard W. Smith, Eighth District, and John W. Flannagan, Ninth District.

The coming primary will be the first under the new Congressional redistricting law passed by the 1934 General Assembly, by which some of the district lines were changed.

Since the term of Senator Carter Glass does not expire this year, Senator Byrd will be the only one of the Virginia Senators to make the race. Last year he was elected after receiving a gubernatorial appointment to replace Claude A. Swanson for the remainder of the Swanson term.

Under the election laws, a candidate in an at-large race must file for the primary 90 days before the primary date. Ninety days from August 7 is May 8.

Candidates for the Senate file with the chairman of the State committee, who is J. Murray Hooker, of Stuart.

State May Ask Venue Change In Krout Case

Unusual Procedure Being Considered in Slaying at Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Md., April 19 (Spl.).—The unusual procedure of the prosecution asking for a change of venue for the murder trial of Claude Krout, charged with the murder of Owen D. Sherley, last April 7, was being considered today by State's Attorney J. Lloyd Harshman. Under Maryland law, both the State and defense may ask for a change of venue.

State's Attorney Harshman said that he would not make a decision before Monday. The trial is scheduled to come up in court here next week, Krout having been indicted yesterday.

Sherley was Krout's landlord and it was an argument over the rent for a room, in which was located a restaurant operated by Krout, that led to the shooting in the lobby of Sherley's hotel.

If a change in venue is asked, it will be the first time in local history that the State has asked removal of a murder trial to another jurisdiction.

Carroll Declines Action on FERA

Westminster, Md., April 19 (Spl.).—The Carroll County Commissioners announced yesterday that they are not contemplating immediate appropriations to secure the Federal Emergency Relief Administration work plan for Carroll County.

The announcement followed the completion of a survey showing that the number of families in need of relief throughout the county was less than 100. A previous estimate had shown approximately 300 families on the rolls.

With fewer than 100 families in need of aid, the commissioners expressed the belief that adoption of the work plan was unnecessary.

FOUR ROSES

BEFORE Prohibition, 92% of America's drinkers preferred a Maryland whiskey like Four Roses.

Not because of price. For Four Roses cost more in those days than most "bonds." Knowing drinkers preferred Four Roses because it was softer, smoother, far more pleasing to the taste.

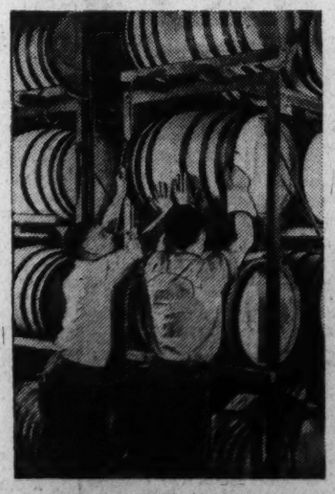
Four Roses is all of that today... still superior in fragrance and bouquet . . . a whiskey that, in a blindfold test among 91 men and women, won hands-down over 30 of America's most famous whiskies!

The reason is simple. Four Roses is made exactly as it was in the old days—by blending the finest, aged-in-oak Maryland Rye. Not a drop of raw green whiskey added! That means you get all the mellow flavor of old whiskey. It means that, if you drink with moderation, you'll get no headache.

For it's the green whiskey in ordinary brands that makes them harsh—"hard to take"—full of hangover.

Try Four Roses and discover a whiskey as pure and smooth as any you ever tasted. Four Roses requires more skill in the making. But Frankfort has been distilling and blending fine whiskey for four generations. Its yeast-culture — key-ingredient in making great whiskey—has been carefully guarded for 50 years. Frankfort knows how!

Four Roses is bottled only in full measure packages. It comes sealed in the exclusive Frankfort Pack, a tin-top-and-bottom carton that makes tampering or adulteration impossible.



Frankfort has one of the largest supplies of aged whiskey in America. This whiskey forms the mellow base of Four Roses.

Try these other fine whiskies!

PAUL JONES
As fine a whiskey as ever went into a glass. Famous since 1865.

ANTIQUE

J. W. Taliaferro Funeral Rites Set for Today

Harrisonburg Jeweler, 77, Long Leader in Church and Civic Affairs.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 19 (Spl.). John W. Taliaferro, 77, veteran jeweler and Harrisonburg's oldest business man, will be buried in Woodbine Cemetery tomorrow afternoon after funeral services from his country home five miles south of here.

Services will be in charge of Dr. E. L. Woolf, of the Methodist Church, assisted by Dr. G. G. Martin, of Staunton. Mr. Taliaferro was an active member of the church since youth and served on the board of stewards for years.

The jewelry firm he founded is in its fifty-fifth year. After undergoing several operations and apparently recovering, Mr. Taliaferro was stricken by a heart attack yesterday while at breakfast.

Mr. Taliaferro at one time was chairman of the Rockingham County Republican committee. He also was a leader in religious and civic affairs.

He learned the jewelry trade in Charlottesville, where he spent eight years. He served as watch inspector for the Baltimore & Ohio, South, and Old Dominion and Southern Railroads.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Ott Taliaferro; a daughter, Mrs. K. M. Livinstone, of Cherrydale, Va., and six sons, Charles Taliaferro, vice consul at Merida, Mexico; Frank O., Ralph, George, Walton and Julian Taliaferro, of Harrisonburg.

Sheriff Believes Pair Were Slain

Discounts Robbery Motive in Fire Deaths.

Bristol, Va., April 19 (Spl.).—Sheriff Robert Giles of Lee County, Va., said yesterday he is convinced that Mr. and Mrs. Joe Vickers, who burned to death at their home near Calvin last Friday night, were murdered. Vickers was 72 and his wife 56.

Giles said he believed the couple had been bound and the house fired. He believes they could have escaped had they not been bound.

The sheriff discounted robbery as a motive. He said it was generally believed that the couple kept approximately $700 at the residence, but that $5 or $6 in silver, a shotgun, pistol and a gold watch were found in the ruins.

3 Railroads Call Men Back to Work

Virginia Freight Increase Cited by Carriers.

Norfolk, Va., April 19 (Spl.). Three railroads—Norfolk & Western, Chesapeake & Ohio, and Virginian—are summoning employes laid off during the last two years, it was announced today by H. W. Furlow, assistant labor commissioner of Virginia.

He said the Chesapeake & Ohio had called 21 men in the Norfolk-Newport News division alone, and the Norfolk & Western and Virginian had put on seven new crews with about 10 men in each.

Demand for coal in New York and New England and an increase in freight handlings are responsible for the recall.

Virginia FERA Work Delayed

Transfer From CWA Setup May Postpone Relief Another Week.

Richmond, April 19 (Spl.).—Details connected with shifting the organization setup from CWA, to the work division of the Virginia emergency relief administration will delay start of new work relief projects another week, J. M. Ribble, chief engineer, said today. The projects originally were due to be in operation April 9, a week after dissolution of the CWA.

One cause of delay has been the difficulty met in naming project engineers for all States cities and counties, Mr. Ribble said.

"However, we are all ready to go in many of the localities," he said. The project engineers will be paid salaries ranging from $25 to $40 a week, according to the population of cities where they are located."

The kind of work a community will be assigned under the new program will depend upon the type of persons who have been classified by the relief directors as eligible for work.

Estate's Executor Fights Income Tax

Holds Deceased Not Liable Under Franchise Law.

Richmond, April 19 (Spl.).—A question of serious import to the finances of the State went on the docket of the Supreme Court of Appeals yesterday when that tribunal granted a writ of error to Eppa Hunton 4th, executor of the estate of Eppa Hunton, jr., former president of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railway, from a judgment of the Hustings Court of Richmond in favor of the State. The executor alleged there had been an erroneous assessment of State income taxes against Eppa Hunton, jr., prior to his death.

The main contention of the executor is that under the State constitution and laws the assessment of the franchise tax upon railroads and other public service corporations is in lieu of all other taxes.

The income taxes assessed and which are at issue in the case were on dividends from railroad stock and, therefore, the executor argues, are not taxable as the franchise tax is in lieu of all other taxes. Specific tax items at issue are $572.58 for 1928; $682.59, for 1929, and $735.81, for 1930.

Gaynor, Rogers and Baxter to Star in Film—Screen and Stage Bills for Week

Sheehan Plans A Triple-Star Brand of Play

'One More Spring' Chosen; Further Narrow Escapes; About Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Having watched his distinguished confreres at M-G-M, Paramount, Twentieth Century, and elsewhere where important pictures are made, pack their casts with stellar names, Winfield Sheehan, vice president in charge of production on the Fox lot, has caught the frenzy for multiple-star rosters.

Now, when Mr. Sheehan makes up his mind to form a coalition of stars, "almost" stars won't do. They must be in the first flight, the best he has on the pay rolls. So what?

So the three most popular stars whose names appear on Fox dotted lines will be seen in a single production when Mr. Sheehan casts Janet Gaynor, Will Rogers and Warner Baxter in "One More Spring," adapted from the novel by Robert Nathan.

This was announced simultaneously with the discovery on Mr. Sheehan's part that he craved a trip to Europe, come July. Upon his return, "One More Spring" will be the first chore to which he will turn his hand.

Not Professional Strangers.

The Gaynor-Rogers-Baxter combination will be only in part an experiment. While to the best of my knowledge these three have not appeared together in any other film, they are by no means professional strangers.

Miss Gaynor and Rogers, it will be recalled, appeared together in "State Fair," and she and Baxter scored with some success in "Paddy, the Next Best Thing." It is not of record that the Messrs. Rogers and Baxter ever appeared in any dramatic film together, although I would not be sure that both may not have done bits in some "Fox Follies," or something, where the entire personnel of the plant took part.

With regard to Winnie Sheehan's midsummer jaunt to the other side, his tour will include Italy, Sicily, Hungary and Austria. There may be a little scouting mixed up in it somewhere. One finds it difficult to forget that his visit to England last summer resulted in the acquisition by Fox of two new stars—"Pat" Paterson and Ketti Gallian—and a loan agreement for Madeleine Carroll's services in "The World Moves On."

A round-up of likely material for these items—not to be confused with the "Last Round-Up"—brings to light tha when the National Theater Players inaugurate their tenth annual spring and summer season on Monday night, April 30, the first performance of "The Pursuit of Happiness" will be sponsored by the Vassar College Alumnae Society of Washington.

It will fall to the happy lot of this first-night audience to welcome to the Capital the new leading woman, leading man and ingenue whom Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran has engaged for the principal roles during his "little season" on E street, to wit and in the order named, Ruth Abbott, Roy Roberts and Mary Loane.

More Narrow Escapes.

Talk about thrills! ejaculates Mr. Hubbard Keavy, chief of this column's West Coast finger-in-the-breeze department, continuing his recital of the dangers of movie stardom, begun in this space yesterday, and evidently thinking about the time Sidney Blackmer, erstwhile husband of Lenore Ulric, was almost drowned — accidentally, of course—during the filming of "Kismet," about four years ago.

The scene was the one in the harem in which the "business" called for the star, Otis Skinner, to grab Blackmer by the back of the neck and duck him in the bathing pool in the middle of the huge Seraglio, holding his head under water a timed number of seconds while he spoke the line "Are ye dead already?"

Rehearsals went swimmingly, says the antic Mr. Keavy. Sidney took his ducking with good grace. But on the first "take," Mr. Skinner became involved in a series of graceful and expressive gestures that caused the speech to run overtime. When the director called "cut," Sidney was supposed to pop out of the water. There was a "cut," but no pop. He had got careless with his breathing apparatus and lost consciousness. It was necessary to revive him with inhalators.

More "Water Stuff."

Fay Wray also might have been drowned had it not been for the quick thinking of Gary Cooper. It was during the making of "The First Kiss," on Chesapeake Bay. In an attempt to transfer from a small boat to a larger one, Fay slipped on a coil of slimy rope and fell between the craft. She was unconscious when Gary reached her and swam with her to shore.

Two unscheduled thrills, Mr. Keavy has found out, occurred a short time ago during the filming of "Sawdust." Patricia Ellis, appearing on the Rialto screen, and her likeness on this page, today, fell from a trapeze and Joe E. Brown was bitten by a lion and later clawed by it.

Although Miss Ellis had doubles to do the actual trapeze work for her—probably that "handsome young man on the flying trapeze," of whom you have heard so much of late—it was necessary for her to hang by her knees for a closeup. In attempting to get back on the bar, she fell into a net. There are two ways of doing this—the right and the wrong. Miss Ellis, unfortunately chose the wrong. A wrenched back was the worst she suffered.

Joe E. Brown, having grown up in one, knows enough about circuses to minimize the dangers of the ring and the animal tents. If he hadn't stood still when a testy lion took a few nips and a couple of punches at him, he might easily have put himself in a spot.

Tossed From Horse.

Joan Bennett is known for her daring. Not so long ago when she insisted upon riding a fractious horse, she was thrown and suffered a fractured hip and collar bones and several small bones in her face. It was 10 weeks before she was allowed to get out of a plaster cast.

Years ago, before either had become known in his own right, George O'Brien and Ricardo Cortez were engaged as doubles for two better-known players to fight 10 rounds in the ring. They were so anxious to make good, that by the fourth round they really were fighting. At the end of the ten, they dropped from exhaustion, but were game enough to shake hands and take it as all in the day's work. They have been friends ever since.

Just a lot of clean, harmless fun, this starring in pictures!

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Payette—Mr. Payette the general manager of the Warner Brothers' interests in the Washington territory, and Mrs. Payette, the former Dorothy Crandall, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Crandall, a name inseparably linked with the development of the motion picture in Washington—are spending the week in New York in observance of the sixth anniversary of their marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Payette were married in this city on April 18, 1928, and are attending all the plays and gay spots along Broadway in celebration of it. Congratulations, Johnny and "Dixie," here's some of the idea!

Just a Nice Gal!

Exercising the prerogatives of any feminine star of the screen, Mary has crossed the boys up slightly by altering the itinerary of her spring tour of personal appearances. Mary will arrive in the National Capital on Saturday morning, instead of Monday as originally announced.

Instead of landing at Norfolk, Mary came East from the Coast on a Shepard Line boat and will land today in Baltimore, where her engagement will end tomorrow night. She will then proceed at once to Washington on a specially constructed triple-deck bus.

On Saturday she will be taken on a tour of the city, probably parked in some easily accessible downtown parking lot and perhaps entered in the Cherry Blossom Festival parade. Mary's a nice gal that way. You can't wear her down.

Mary, in case you haven't heard, is the 3,000-pound trained rhinoceros—the only one ever educated to the point of appearing in pictures—that plays an important part in "Tarzan and His Mate," with Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan.

She is accompanied by George Emerson, the man who devoted more than a year to the task of preparing her for her screen debut.

A Pair of Grand Maws!

Among New Week's Screen Stars

Katherine Hepburn, left, returns to the local screen at RKO-Keith's tomorrow in "Spitfire," a film adaptation of Lula Vollmer's play, "Trigger." Opening today at the Rialto is "Let's Be Ritzy," in which the leading feminine role is played by Patricia Ellis, right. Lew Ayres is the male star.

Last Roadshow Of the Season Is Due Monday

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

For the first time in several weeks, two downtown theaters will be devoted to the purveyance of living drama beginning next Monday night.

To complete the new week's roster of theatrical attractions, a new burlesque offering will be presented at the Gayety and five of the seven downtown, first-run picture houses will project new feature pictures, with return engagements booked for the Metropolitan and Columbia.

The last road-show attraction of the legitimate season will be given its world premiere in the National Theater next Monday night, when the Theater Guild will open "Jig Saw" prior to its New York engagement. This new comedy by Dawn Powell has been staged by Philip Moeller and boasts a cast of genuine guild distinction. The leading roles have been intrusted to Ernest Truex and Spring Byington, with Cora Witherspoon, Helen Westley and numerous others of the first rank in support. Settings and costumes have been designed by Lee Simonson. The usual matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

• • • •

At the Belasco next week, beginning also on Monday night, Wee and Leventhal will present S. N. Behrman's play of "The Second Man," with Bert Lytell and Lora Baxter in the principal roles. "The Second Man" is described as a "gay and nimble comedy of speech, trait and amorous misunderstandings in a sophisticated circle." In addition to the stellar players, Dwight Frye and Rosalind Russell will be seen in piquant characterizations. The play has been directed by Edward Hartford.

Evidently firm in his conviction that "old friends are best," Jimmie Lake promises a return engagement of "Sliding" Billie Watson at the Gayety next week, beginning with the customary Sunday matineee, in an entirely new show. The Six Rosebuds, Lew Devine, Mickey Markwood and Wilmer Horner lead the support, with Edna Dee reengaged as featured feminine artiste in new specialties.

Opening today at the Rialto the major film feature will be Universal's production of "Let's Be Ritzy," in which Lew Ayres and Patricia Ellis are the cofeatured players. In the supporting cast are Isabel Pewell, Frank McHugh, Berton Churchill, Robert McWade, Hedda Hopper and Betty Lawford. The story is of a young couple who have a tough time trying to make both ends meet—until they take a friend's advice and "go ritzy." The bill will be completed by a varied list of short sound subjects.

• • • •

Foremost in the minds of many among the new pictures opening in the Capital tomorrow will be "Spitfire," latest vehicle for the much-discussed talents of Katharine Hepburn, which comes to RKO-Keith's. It is a screen adaptation of Lulu Vollmer's play of "Trigger." Supporting the star are Ralph Bellamy, Robert Young and John Cromwell. The central character of the drama is a deeply religious young mountain girl. The bill will be completed by the accustomed short supplementary features.

• • • •

Norma Shearer, Robert Montgomery and Herbert Marshall, supported by "Skeets" Gallagher, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the late Lilyan Tashman, Arthur Jarrett, Helen Jerome Eddy and others of note, will continue the run begun at the Palace on the screen of Loew's Columbia, beginning tomorrow. News, comedy and added short reels will complete the bill.

Romance of Hairpin Has Hollywood Practically Agog; Lewis S. Stone Plans Long Summer Cruise; Gossip From the Boulevard.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, April 18.—In the breast of his coat, over his heart, "Cotton" Warburton, of the All-American, is carrying a hairpin.

WESLEY RUGGLES

Until last week it belonged to Myrna Loy. Three days ago, in a friendly scuffle at the University of Southern California, where he is quarter back, the hairpin dropped out of Warburton's pocket. As he picked it up he mentioned casually that Myrna Loy gave it to him. Currently the school paper carried a quizzical story on Cotton's infatuation, and the wiry athlete didn't bother to deny it.

But the sad truth is that Warburton was visiting the M-G-M studio last week, and happened to be standing on the set where W. S. VanDyke is directing Miss Loy. Just one second before the scene started the hairpin dropped out of Myrna's hair. The script girl, dashing into the scene, picked up the hairpin and hurriedly handed it to Warburton, who happened to be the nearest person.

So what now?

Irving Pichel's Quip.

Cecil B. DeMille was explaining to Irving Pichel the difference in Rome after the Christian era and the Rome before Christ in which the action of "Cleopatra" takes place.

"Roughly speaking, then," said Pichel, "your pictures fall into two categories."

"Only two?" questioned DeMille.

"Yes," answered Pichel; "the C. B. DeMille productions and the B. C. DeMille pictures!"

Japan Is Next U. S. War Foe, Says Mitchell

Europe Has No Desire to Fight This Country, Gavel Club Told.

Baltimore, April 19 (Spl.).—War between the United States and any European nation is highly doubtful, Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, retired, former chief of the Army Aviation Corps, declared in a speech before the Gavel Club at the Southern Hotel here today.

This country's next war, he said, will be fought in the Pacific, and our opponent will be Japan, he asserted.

"The Japanese are trying to put over another Genghis Khan—another all-conquering Oriental—who will sweep the white nations before him," Gen. Mitchell asserted. "The United States is the only stumbling block to that plan."

He deplored failure of the United States to retain its supremacy in aviation, and declared that when war comes this Nation will have to import its fighting planes from Europe.

"The Europeans are just a bunch of tribes fighting among themselves," he said. "They don't want to fight us. We can wait until we see which side is winning when war comes over there, and then we can jump in on the winning side."

Gen. Mitchell, who now lives in Middleburg, Va., said he favors a Government subsidy for all airmail lines, but believes they should be forced to provide adequate safety devices for passengers.

The Army, he said, is doing virtually no flying now, and the Army chiefs are not particularly interested in the Army branch of the service.

President Roosevelt is alive to the situation, he said, and will take action soon to make the American Army more efficient in aviation.

Last Meeting of Lee and Jackson on Chancellorsville Battlefield Will Be Commemorated in Night Ceremonies May 1 Under U. D. C. Chapter.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 19 (Spl.). — Commemorating the last bivouac together on May 1, 1863, of the Confederate generals, Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson, on the Chancellorsville Battlefield, a log fire will blaze on the night of May 1, and tribute will be paid to the memory of the leaders in ceremonies under auspices of the Fredericksburg Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Dr. Douglas Freeman, of Richmond, will deliver the principal address.

Ten miles from this city, on the Furnace road, is the site chosen for the ceremonies, at the junction of Furnace road and Orange plank road. In the angle between the roads, Lee and Jackson met the night of May 1, 1863, while the Confederate Army was confronted by Gen. Joseph E. Hooker's Federal Army.

Seated before a small fire, the Confederate leaders received news from Gen. J. E. B. Stuart that Hooker's right wing was exposed, and out of a conference grew Jackson's strategic march around Hooker's army next day and the assault on Hooker's lines which swept the Union forces before it and cost Jackson his life.

The plan of having a fire at the spot where the two generals last saw each other is attracting wide interest. Invitations have been sent to all chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Officials of the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park are cooperating with the U. D. C. in preparing for the rites.

Death Held Accidental.

Harrisville, W. Va., April 19 (Spl.). Dr. T. W. Keith, coroner, today returned a finding of accidental death for Clyde Fluharty, 22, oil well pumper, who was found dead in an oil tank near Smithville yesterday. The body was found by Fluharty's father.

State Farm Started By West Virginia

Huntington, W. Va., April 19 (Spl.).—Another experiment in State farming has been started by West Virginia, with establishment of a State garden on a tract of 450 acres leased near Barboursville.

Purpose of the project, according to J. A. Chambers, member of the board, is to raise vegetables for the use of State institutions. Part of the cultivation will be done by inmates of the Huntington State Hospital, while the rest will be done by employed workers. B. P. Morris, of Huntington, has been appointed supervisor.

If the garden proves a success, the tract will be purchased for a permanent project.

Old Virginia Society Adds New Prestige

Homes Being Rebuilt in Famous Hunting Sections.

Mr. Oscar T. Crosby Puts Treasure of Art in "View Tree."

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

More and more frequently outsiders from all parts of the country are invading the hunting sections of old Virginia. Warrenton, Middleburg, Orange and other places are welcoming newcomers and many of the beautiful old homes, once sadly in need of restoration, are now comfortable and hospitable dwellings.

One of handsomest of the residences around Warrenton is that of Mr. Oscar T. Crosby, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. View Tree, as the place has been named, tops a high hill and overlooks the scene of the second Battle of Bull Run.

The house, built of stone with wide Colonial porticoes, is a treasure trove for the many odd and beautiful furnishings which Mr. Crosby and the late Mrs. Crosby have collected in many years of world-wide travel.

Art From Far Places.

The large living room contains numerous pieces of Italian renaissance furniture and the walls are hung with panels collected in the Far East. A more formal drawing room with its Aubusson chairs, rugs and tapestries, its crystal chandelier and its old portraits would be a fitting salon for one of the Louis.

Mr. Crosby is now on a trip through South America. His daughters, Countess Caracciolo di Melito, of Italy; Mrs. Arthur Hornblow, of California and New York, and Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller have been keeping house in the lovely old home.

They have lately rented it for two months to Mr. and Mrs. Enzio Fiermonte, who have chosen the Virginia mountains for a spring home en route from Florida to New York.

Hornblows Lease Home.

Mrs. Fiermonte before her marriage last fall was Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor Dick, of New York, and with her handsome Italian husband will be a charming addition to Warrenton society.

Mrs. Hornblow and her small son, Terry, have gone to New York. Mrs. Hornblow has leased a house at Westport, Conn., for the summer, where Mr. Hornblow will join her later in the season.

The Countess Caracciolo and Mrs. Miller have moved to the Warrenton School for Girls, which is owned by their aunt, Mlle. Bouligny, sister of the late Mrs. Crosby. In June, when Mr. Crosby returns from his travels, they plan to sail for Italy to spend the summer with the countess and her family.

The wedding will take place May 26 in the Church of the Advent at Westbury, Long Island, the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Richard D. Pope, officiating. A reception will be held at the Holmes country place in Brookville, Long Island.

New Hampshire Senate Wives Receive D. A. R.

Keyes' Colonial Mansion in Alexandria Scene of Function.

Mrs. Henry W. Keyes, wife of the senior Senator from New Hampshire (well known as Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, the author), and Mrs. Fred H. Brown, wife of the junior Senator from New Hampshire, entertained at a tea yesterday afternoon from 4 until 6:30 o'clock at Mrs. King's home on North Alfred street, in Alexandria, Va., in honor of the New Hampshire delegation to the D. A. R. Congress.

The guests, several hundred members of official and residential society of Washington and Alexandria, were afforded an opportunity to view the Keyes' lovely old colonial mansion, parts of which are well over a century old.

This home, built of old handmade brick, which gives it a warm, mellow look, is set in a walled garden, in which in addition to a beautiful rose garden which contains many varieties, there are box bushes from Kenmore, Ashlawn, Brandon, Wakefield, and other historic places in Virginia. The double drawing rooms on the first floor are done in blue and buff, in keeping with the period in which the house was built. These also are the colors of the D. A. R. Society.

These rooms, decorated with yellow roses and blue larkspur arranged in vases, opened on to the dining room, decorated in red and white, the heavy red corded silk draperies were a rich background for clusters of white sweet-peas and baby's breath which adorned the room. On the center of the tea table was a rare jade centerpiece brought from Peiping, China, consisting of an oval bowl encircled with vari-colored jade grapes, and with miniature jade trees at either end.

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland; Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. Fred A. Britten, Mrs. Sol Bloom, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Charles B. Drake, Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Will Rogers, Mrs. Charles W. Tobey, Mrs. Harry C. Sanborn Mrs. Frank Dillard, Mrs. John M. Formal Collars Go Fashionable For Evenings

Particularly Nice When White Ones Worn on Black.

Collars have deserted their good manners and are acting like bad little children who make a fuss when bedtime comes. Instead of retiring from the scene with docility when twilight arrives, the new collars insist upon staying up late to see what's going on. They fasten themselves not only upon evening wraps, but boldly attach themselves to evening gowns.

This formal collar idea is just another excuse for using the good old combination of black and white. It works out quite nicely when the dress is stiff black satin and the collar is white corded silk. But for something brand-new, a white, spongey crepe princess gown with heavy black satin lapels can't be improved upon. The fashionable young creature who chooses this arrangement will undoubtedly wear black slippers, preferably plain pumps, and black gloves. If she has an extravagant admirer, she may have a black orchid to pin in the center of her bosom. That floral accent will lift the costume out of the striking into the dramatic.

Formal gowns with collars are by no means limited to the black-and-white realm. A particularly springlike combination is apple green taffeta with blue-gray organdie cape collar, giving the effect of a rain cloud hovering over a verdant landscape. Very unusual. And very becoming to blondes.

There is no limit to the shapes and types of collars used on gowns that go dining and dancing this season. Some are masculine, sharp-pointed lapel affairs. Some are rolled and draped in the manner of shawls. And some spread out over the shoulders like crisp little capes.

Student Named "Baldy" Grows Luxuriant Hair

If He Can, You Can, Too—With This Efficacious Product.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A STUDENT nicknamed "Baldy" suffered much embarrassment from the dearth of hair on his pate. To comfort the poor fellow a Jesuit priest, head of the science department at Gonzaga University, set to work to discover a means to grow hair on a bald head. After considerable research and experimentation he perfected a formula. And the story goes that "Baldy" enjoyed many haircuts the following year—and lost his nickname.

The product is manufactured by a group of deaf people in Spokane, Wash., and serves as their source of livelihood. The Rev. Father himself accepts none of the royalties resulting from sales, but turns them over to the university.

The liquid is a new combination of antiseptic and stimulating chemicals with natural food oils and puts the scalp in a condition to grow hair.

Due to its antiseptic powers it clears up stubborn cases of dandruff and helps the scalp return to a healthy state.

It bears the indorsement from many barber shops as being excellent for falling hair and dry hair. As both conditions are the result of undernourishment and lack of stimulation, this remedy should effectually care for both.

Bear in mind a bad condition of the hair has been coming on for some time, and will take some time to cure.

For Harassed Mothers.

The party package in a downtown store is nearly a party in itself. Harassed hostesses who must see junior's ears are washed, the ice cream ordered, the guests under control and the decorations up will find one of these handy.

The packages come in three styles, "Humpty Dumpty," Spring Flowers and Spring Showers.

They each include 18 napkins, a table cover three yards long, an ornate center piece, crepe moss and a prize. The whole ensemble can be set up in no time, removed with little trouble. It saves the hostess a world of trouble and satisfies the kiddies.

Utopian Wave.

A permanent wave in the midst of a bridge game! Once a ridiculous idea, now an easy possibility.

With these modern waves there is no longer a necessity for sitting hours under a heavy overhead apparatus. There's no longer any need to brave the agonies of binding, winding and rewinding. For with these new permanents there are no electrical connections and the consequent uncomfortable headdress.

The hair is wrapped and steamed in oil. After a short while a mass of straggly locks are miraculously transformed to a glory of natural-looking curls. And the process as simple as a plain shampoo.

And beneficial to the hair, too. It has a tendency to normalize dry hair and make oily hair softer and glossier.

During the process the recipient may walk around and do quite as she pleases.

After the wave is completed she will find it is simple to keep, requiring no more care than the ordinary head of hair. The waves are large, loose and natural looking.

They're being given at a downtown store.

Spare That Coiffure.

Make-up bands can be a salvation to the hair. If they are fastened around the head to keep the stray locks back, then cold cream, lotions powder, and rouge may be splashed or patted on vigorously without getting in the hair.

After a woman has gone to the expense and trouble of having an expert arrange her coiffure she wants to keep it sleek and well groomed. These bands hold the hair in place, and protect it from extraneous make-up.

Gift Suggestion.

They're available in a wide variety of designs featuring everything from field daisies to poppies. Their price and attractiveness place them in the front rank of small, inexpensive gift suggestions.

They're available in a Connecticut avenue shop.

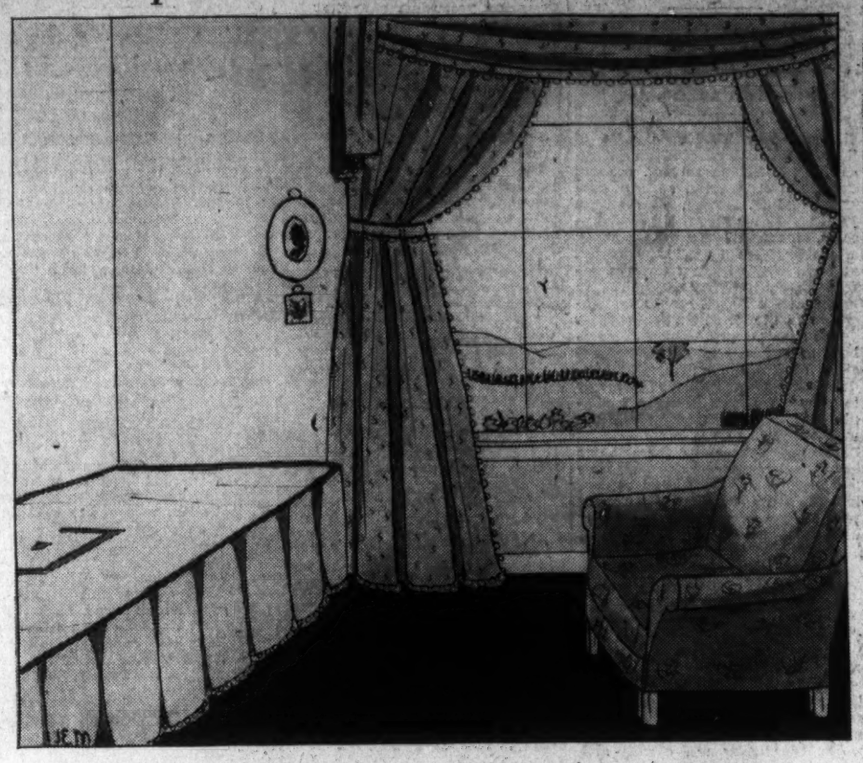
Green Is Suitable for Guest Rooms; Adaptable for Summer and Winter



Impersonality Essential; Adaptability for Guests Important.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

HAVE YOU ever thought of the requisites of a pleasant, attractive guest room?

It is true a guest bedroom should be impersonal, neither definitely masculine nor feminine in its general character, so it can be adapted to its various occupants, yet at the same time it can be given color and charm to make it inviting.

First of all, let's consider the color scheme. Green is a delightful color both in summer and winter. For the warm months accents of white give it even more of a feeling of crisp freshness.

In one attractive guest room the walls are painted a soft, restful green. . . . the woodwork is in flat white in a dull finish. The floor is covered in a rug of moss green with an indistinct jasped effect.

Draped in White.

The windows are hung in filmy white voile embroidered in an all-over clover leaf design. These are used in lieu of draperies, and are shirred quite full, hanging to the floor. A swag effect is used as a valance across the top. The edges of these curtains are trimmed with white ball fringe. This window treatment softens the light, but does not shut out any air.

The bed has a cover of primrose yellow cotton banded and monogrammed in white. It is edged at the sides and across the end in white ball fringe.

Guest Courtesy.

In one corner of the room is a slant top desk, also of maple, and well supplied with letter paper, pen, ink and blotter. This is one of the courtesies every guest appreciates. A lamp near the desk has a base of pewter finished metal and a shade of yellow stretched muslin.

At the other side of the lamp is a comfortable arm chair slip-covered in a charming field flower English chintz, delightfully cool looking in warm weather.

A small table beside the bed bears smoking accessories in white pottery and a green water jug and tumbler. A few late issues of magazines and a good light novel or two complete this carefully appointed room.

Courtesies Such as Books, Stationery Should Not Be Overlooked.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

If April 20 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to 12 noon, from 3 to 5 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a. m., from 1 to 3 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to midnight.

If April 20 is your natal day you were born when the Sun was in the zodical sign Taurus. This signifies that you have a great deal of self-confidence, a very resolute nature, and are very tenacious. You will display good judgment, knowing your proclivity to be extremely stubborn, if you make a determined fight to overcome this characterstic and to be more open-minded to advice and reasonings frequently offered by others.

In your social activities on this date be very careful not to lose your temper, regardless what the provocation might be. In business affairs give careful consideration to any propositions submitted for your consideration and do not jump hastily to any definite conclusion as a little later on you may wish to reconsider the matter.

The woman born on April 20 will be much happier if she refrains from trying to dominate everyone around her.

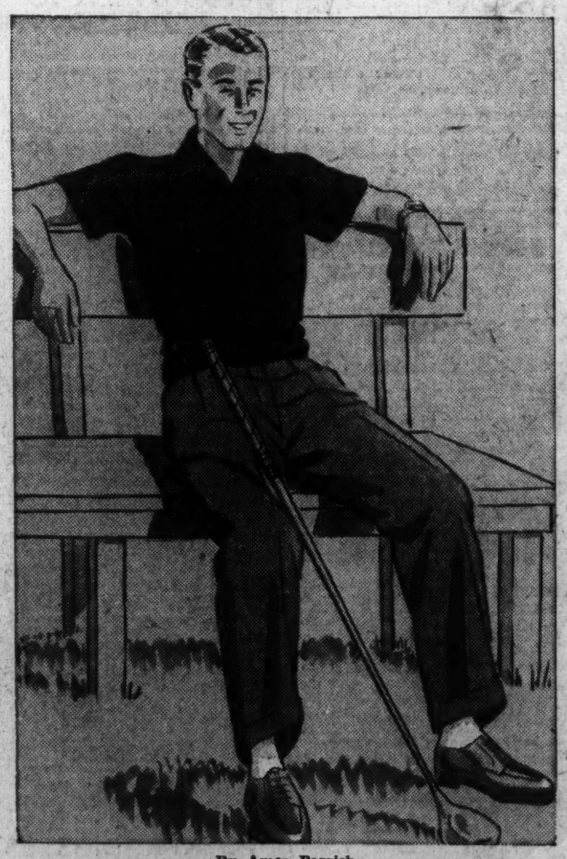
Below Is an Average Golfer, Slacks, Open Shirt and All



By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, April 19.—If you took pictures of better dressed golfers down on Florida and southern California golf courses a few months ago, and then took more pictures of what they're wearing at the better clubs right now . . . you'd get a composite picture reading like this:

Open Shirt.

Many golfers will tell you they shoot a better, smoother game when they wear knickers.

But the average golfer picks slacks . . . likely gray flannel slacks. As the weather gets warmer, white slacks and striped serges appear. (Good length for a slack is just barely down to the ankle . . . and no longer.)

(Copyright, 1934.)

Men's golf clothes of the types described are available in Washington in all the better men's shops and department stores.

Party Desserts Should Be Spectacular as Well as Delicious.

Girls Study; Seem Brighter Than Boys

Ogden, Utah, April 19 (Spl.).—Girls surpass boys in school work not because they are brighter but because they study more diligently.

This conclusion has been reached by Keith Wahlquist, superintendent of Weber County schools, following a general survey of the schools of the nation.

Mr. Wahlquist said intelligence tests of school children had shown that intellectual differences between boys and girls depended upon the personal attitudes of the students.

BACHELOR—of ARTS

By John Erskine

The Story So Far.

The first half of Alec's sophomore year at Columbia saw his world crash around his ears. As a student he had just slipped through; as a football player he had gotten no farther than the scrub; as a tenor in the Glee Club he had been a disaster. Now, at the end of the Christmas vacation, his father broke the news that the family business had been wrecked by the depression; from now on Alec would have to earn his own way.

The only field in which Alec had been successful was that of love. Gladys, the college widow, whom he didn't want, had pursued him, and he had won the heart of red-haired Mimi. Mimi was a straight shooter. Almost as soon as she had entered Barnard, her own father had lost his money. But instead of going home to St. Louis, she had got a job as cashier in a drug store. Alec had wanted to solve her problem by marrying her immediately, but had been forced to abandon this idea for lack of funds. There was also, hovering menacingly in the background, Woolsey, the bachelor professor; he was in love with Mimi too, and already had an education and a job.

Alec, who had never earned a penny in his life, told his father that he'd go back to Columbia and make his own way. He didn't realize what he was up against in that spring of 1932.

At the corner of 114th, the sight of the College Shop prompted two ideas, the first not pleasant, the second hopeful. The unpleasant idea was that he owed the shop five dollars. Having been short of cash at the end of the year, he had bought his father's Christmas gift on credit—a luxurious cravat. The credit was to last only a week. The man in the shop would perhaps like to be paid, especially since business was a bit slack.

Why not improve business for him and get a commission? The second and more inspiring idea. How much business would you have to bring in to make 5 per cent come to twenty dollars a week? Alec tried to compute. He could have worked it easily with a pencil and paper, but in your head it was hard. Well, anyway, he might as well suggest it to the man in the shop.

"How's business?"

"Not so good. Few customers. Most of them don't pay their bills."

"Sure, it'd have a better chance."

Alec took out his pocketboot and looked respectfully at the three five-dollar bills which were to keep him alive for the next fortnight. One of them he lifted gently and placed on the counter.

"Now we're square!"

The man seized it by the ends, snapped it once or twice, then put it in the cash register.

"The first money I've taken in today!"

"Now if I bring in the new trade, I'll get the commission?"

"Couldn't think of it," said the man brusquely. "I don't make an extra 5 per cent. There's no margin."

Somewhat weak in the knees, Alec returned to the street, with only the moral satisfaction of being out of debt.

In the dean's office there were two ahead of him, but not serious cases. The dean was standing up at the desk opposite his open door, and the atmosphere of the room suggested that the morning was genial.

"Glad to see you, Hamilton," said the dean, when the other two were gone. "What can I do for you? Sit down."

Alec took the chair at the end of the desk and recited once more his father's misfortune. The dean's face turned grave.

"It happens often nowadays, Hamilton. I'm awfully sorry for your father."

"I had one idea," said Alec. It had come to him that moment. "You're interested in the health of the students, and the college spends a lot of money to keep up the medical office and all that, but it's wasted if the students don't eat wisely."

"Wisely?" queried the dean.

"If their diet is bad, sir. Now I should think the college might employ some one to make regular reports on what the students are eating—where they eat—at what hours. Wouldn't that be worth while?"

The dean pushed back into the recesses of the chair, drew up one leg under him and sat on his foot. His eyes closed slightly as he studied Alec, and there was a threat of a smile at one side of his mouth.

"Where do you eat, Hamilton?"

"Different places—at the house sometimes — at Childs — at drug stores—mostly at drug stores. Of course, during football season, at the training table."

"What do you eat at the drug stores?

"Me?"

"Yes, you."

"Well, sir, I like a good breakfast. Eggs, toast, coffee. If I have the money, sometimes a cereal."

The dean nodded. "That ought to keep you going. How about lunch?"

Horrible Example.

"Yes, sir, at times."

"And maybe a sundae? Particularly a nut sundae?"

"Well—sometimes, sir."

The dean stopped sitting on his foot and stood up. "If we install this health officer, we'll lean toward some one who is not himself a horrible example. Let me think a while about your case. I have more confidence in—er—my ideas, than—er—in yours."

Well, he was beaten so far—no use denying it. Any plans he invented would fail. Why not break the news to Mimi before it got worse?

She was at the Barnard dormitory when he asked for her. A queer place, he reflected—like a monastery, or a nunnery, or whatever it is women are religious in. They made you sit down in a waiting room and send up your name, and they looked you over as though they'd like to fumigate you. Strange that a sensible girl should of her own will enter such a life!

She was so happy to see him, she almost ran across the threshold, then stopped at his doleful countenance.

"Alec, dear! What on earth is the matter?"

"What's happened to you? You're a wreck! And here I've been just bursting to tell you the good news!"

"You're in college."

"Dad has enough money again—but that wouldn't make you sad, would it? Don't you want an educated wife?"

"Have you been ill? What's wrong?"

"Nothing at all. Hurry up! I want to hear about you."

Walking down Broadway he insisted on every chapter of her good news, how her father, even in the autumn, had found his affairs straightening out, and how just before the holiday she had the prospect of escape from the drug store. Her Christmas present had been the return to college with a small allowance, but large enough.

"Do you know, Alec, I'm glad of my working-girl experience! I have you to thank for it. Every one's been so kind to me, it's absurd. They never would have paid so much attention if I'd come in like the ordinary freshman!"

In his heart he knew she would have had all eyes on her, no matter how she had come.

"Room at the Top" Should Be Aspiring Nurses' Motto, Say Leaders in Profession

Unemployed Are Untrained, Maintains Red Cross Head

She Urges Quality and Not Quantity, Deplores Training Received in Schools Connected With Small Hospitals.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

"ROOM AT THE TOP!" Every person who has won fame and success in an overcrowded field has been inspired by that battle cry. And, according to leaders in the nursing profession, it is the only possible motto for the girl who becomes a trained nurse today.

The problems of raising professional standards, and of finding some way for the thousands of unemployed nurses and the sick who need skilled care to be brought together, will be primary topics of discussion at the nurses biennial convention which opens Monday at Red Cross headquarters.

Important Chiefs.

Important heads of Government nursing services who are on the committee in charge of arrangements for the convention are Miss Clara D. Noyes, director of the nursing service for the American Red Cross; Miss Lucy Minnigerode, director of the Public Nursing Service for the United States Public Health Service; Miss Beatrice Bowman, chief of Navy nurses; Miss Julia C. Stimson, chief of Army nurses; Mrs. Mary A. Hickey, superintendent of nurses in the United States Veteran's Bureau, and Miss Elinor Gregg, supervisor of nurses in the Indian Bureau.

Discussing the overcrowded condition in the nursing profession, and speaking of the possibilities for advancement, Miss Noyes said yesterday:

"The sympathetic, highly trained nurse has every chance of getting to the top. The nurses with poor, inadequate training make the majority of the unemployed in the profession today.

Standards Raised.

The work of the committee on Grading of Nursing Schools, of which Miss Noyes is a member, has done much to raise the standards of the profession, she said.

"Since this committee began work hundreds of training schools have been closed," she said. "For if a training school is up to the required standards, it costs more to run than the employment of graduate nurses.

"In one State 23 nursing schools were closed. Often people ask how graduates of these inferior schools passed the State board examinations. The answer is members of these boards were appointed by politicians who found it to their interests to promote the schools."

Not only were the schools themselves inferior, Miss Noyes declared, but their requirements were so low they admitted people unqualified to enter the profession.

"One of the greatest errors was the admission of very young girls," she said. "Many schools took students as young as 18. That was absurd. A girl of that age not only does not know what she wants to do in life, but she is not capable of assuming the responsibilities which are a part of a nurse's job. Because these young girls lacked the poise and dignity essential to a nurse, they caused the members of the profession to be unduly criticized.

"Much has been done in the work toward quality, not quantity, by the demand for higher education and the incorporation of nursing schools into universities. Today there are 25 nursing schools run by universities."

Eight-Hour Day.

Much has been done in recent years to provide an eight-hour day for nurses and to establish an agency which furnishes nurses by the hour, Miss Noyes said.

"We hope these measures will relieve the unemployment among nurses, and enable more people who need nurses to employ them," she concluded.

Opportunities for nurses in the United State Public Health Service were discussed by Miss Lucy Minnigerode, head of that service.

"The nurse who wishes to enter the United States Public Health Service must have graduated from an accredited nursing school, and have had two years post-graduate experience," she said.

"She then must pass a civil service examination. Well prepared nurses have every chance of advancement in this work for all our officials are promoted from the ranks."

There is a tremendous need for nurses in Public Health Nursing and Home Hygiene Service, Miss Malinde Havey, National director of this service for the Red Cross said yesterday.

"The need has never been greater," she said. "For private funds are depleted, and thousands are suffering from diseases brought on by poverty. Our trouble is finding funds to employ the nurses. However, once a nurse has entered this service her ability determines the rate of her advancement."

D. A. R. Hobbies Are Discussed By the Owners

They Range From Stamps to Writing and to Babies.

INTELLECTUAL snobbery has no place in the teaching of American history. The subject should be presented so as to appeal to all classes of people alike. This is the opinion of Dr. Flora Myers Gillentine, former historian general of the D. A. R., and a candidate for the post of president general next year.

A teacher of history, along with other subjects, in three Southern colleges, Dr. Gillentine did an interesting piece of work in her office of historian general of the organization. Among plans she sponsored was the Nation-wide program of teaching history concretely. Window displays, illustrating different phases of American life was one of her ideas.

Dr. Gillentine's hobby is fishing. After her daily lectures at the University of Arkansas, she climbs in her car, drives to Hot Springs, gets into a rowboat and enjoys her favorite sport until after sundown.

* * * *

Living in the past physically as well as mentally, is a diversion dear to the heart of Mrs. D. S. Currie, chairman of State legislation and State registrar from North Carolina. She accomplishes this by means of a log cabin, which she has furnished with relics and articles of the past.

She started the cabin on a one-room plan, modeled after the homes of early settlers. It has since grown into an eight-room log house, with an elaborate fish pond and flower garden. She calls it "Knapdale," after an ancestral home town in Scotland.

* * * *

Mrs. Charles S. Lobingier, official delegate from the Philippines, now a resident of Washington, speaks with pleasure of working with Chinese women in club work at Shanghai. Widely traveled and interested in a variety of people and places, Mrs. Lobingier's hobby could most accurately be described as "cosmopolitanism."

She is the wife of the Hon. Charles S. Lobingier, for ten years a United States judge in the Philippines and later judge of the United States court in China. While in the former country, Mrs. Lobingier organized the Women's Club of Manila, now enlarged into the Federation of Women's Clubs, with its work extending throughout the islands.

* * * *

A collector of everything from postage stamps to babies! That is how Mrs. Amos A. Fries, National vice president and publicity chairman of the C. A. R., describes herself.

Writing is the hobby of Mrs. Julian Talmadge, former vice president general, from Georgia. She formerly was able to combine her hobby with her D. A. R. assignment as chairman of the magazine committee. She is the very popular president of the Daughters of Runnemede and was the first Georgia chairman of the National defense committee of D. A. R.

* * * *

The Washington home of Mrs. Herbert M. Lord, wife of the late Gen. Lord, chief of finance in the U. S. Army during the war, gives testimony of her hobby, rare old paintings, which she has collected for many years. Mrs. Lord was former corresponding secretary general of D. A. R.

* * * *

The youngest candidate ever to run for vice president general's chair is Mrs. John Y. Richardson, retiring State regent of Oregon. Known as one of the "fashion plates" of the present congress, she is modern in her choice of a hobby, aviation.

* * * *

Another travel enthusiast is Mrs. W. P. H. McFadden, retiring State regent and vice president general candidate from Texas. Known as the "most charitable woman in Texas," Mrs. McFadden's car has covered the well-known open spaces on many a work of mercy during the past several years, acording to those who know her best.

The first California State regent ever born in that State, is Mrs. Frederick F. Gundrum, of Sacramento, also a candidate for the vice president generalship. Her main hobby is horseback riding, which she has indulged in since childhood. She is very fond of the drag hunt, and with friends and relatives enjoys this sport near her California home.

Japanese More Casual About Blossoms Than We

JAPAN MAY BE the Land of the Rising Sun but the Japanese don't get up at sunrise to see the cherry blooms. At least there is no organized community effort to do so, or in any other way to hold a festival in honor of the blossoms.

A little later, after the cherry blossoms, the Japanese do have a big spring festival concerned with their Shinto religion, but this has nothing to do with the cherry trees.

Build Tea Houses.

They take their cherry blossoms gratefully but more casually than we take them in Washington. Instead of having elaborate parades, floats, sunrise services and fireworks, they build temporary little tea-houses under the blooming trees and go there in small groups—families, lovers, congenial parties, much as Washingtonians go to Rock Creek Park on Sunday to enjoy their cherry blossoms.

Along with the blossoms in Japan, there is music, but it too, is different and also much more casual than musical efforts as staged here.

Japanese music has a meandering, wistful charm to it, with soft notes of the flute, samisen and kioto very different from Occidental music. There are some dissonances, but always a cobwebby thread of melody, too.

"Black Eyes," which is in modern style, or it may be "Kurokami" ("Black Hair"), which is over 400 years old, is familiar all over the country. Another popular number Japanese ears might hear among the cherry blossoms is "Gion Konta," named for one of the gay streets of the capital, which is played on an instrument similar to a xylophone with drum accompaniment, while a geisha girl sings.

Geisha girls sing all the popular songs but differently from American crooners. They almost all have harsh voices. This is true of their counterpart, the American chorus girl, as Jun Tsuchiya, secretary to the ambassador, reminded the listener while playing some records of authentic Japanese music in the library of the embassy one afternoon.

Old Music Taught.

The ancient and most dignified music is kept alive in special schools where it is taught to girls of aristocratic families. Private homes are often the scenes of concerts of old Japanese music, much as private homes here are scenes of chamber music programs where masterpieces of Mozart, Bach and Haydn are revived.

Piano and violin are taught in regular schools. One of the most beautiful records in Mme. Saito's intriguing collection demonstrates the work of Japanese youths and maidens effectively. It is a record of the National Hymn of Japan, played by students of Tokyo's Academy of Music, with choruses of soft, flute-like quality, and blended with all the subtle nicety of colors in an old Japanese print.

There is no dancing in private homes, as is the case over here. The girls of the aristocracy occasionally engage in state dances with the special fans and hair-dressing of old times. But, except in westernized tea rooms and big hotels there is no dancing of the American type.

Writing League Will Entertain Famous Guests

Pen Women to Hear Prominent Writers and Editors.

A DISTINGUISHED group of writers and editors, a famous sculptor, a noted statesman, and a widely known composer will furnish the intellectual fare at the celebrity breakfast to be given by the League of American Pen Women tomorrow at the Willard Hotel.

Another Speaker.

Dr. Wightman F. Melton, of Oglethorpe, Ga., formerly editor of Verse-craft magazine and now editor of Bozart and Contemporary Verse, will be another speaker.

James Warner Bellah, contributor to the Saturday Evening Post and author of six novels, including "Dancing Lady" and "White Piracy," will be another of the speakers.

A discussion of "The Trend of Historical Novels" will be given by Louise Wallace Hackney, who has won acclaim in literary circles by her "Wing of Fame," based on the life of James Smithson, founder of the Smithsonian Institution.

Borglum to Talk.

It's the Brainy Girls Who Make Sororities

The Snobs and the Wealthy Ones, Who Used to Be Surefire, Aren't so Good Any More, Says Panhellenic President.

A FAMILY TREE and father's check book are excess baggage for the girl who hopes to receive a sorority rush when she enters a university. Sororities aren't paying as much attention to ancestors and bank accounts as they used to. Brains, talents and athletic skill are the things they look for in their pledges nowadays.

Snobs Are Out.

"The old-fashioned sorority girl, a cross between a social butterfly and a snob, is definitely out," said Miss Clara Critchfield, George Washington University student, yesterday. Miss Critchfield is president of the Intercollegiate Pan-Hellenic Association of Urban Universities, which opened its seventh annual conference yesterday morning in Washington.

"Sororities undoubtedly want members who come from cultured homes, but they have stopped demanding girls with great-great-grandfathers who fought in the Battle of Bunker Hill or came over on the Mayflower," continued Miss Critchfield. "And all the money a prospective pledge needs is enough to meet the expenses incurred by membership. Few girls are kept out of sororities by lack of money."

But brains?

Very Important.

"Very important," declared Miss Critchfield. "Especially since the scholastic ratings of all sororities are announced at the end of each term. No sorority wants to be at the bottom of the list."

This matter of scholarship enters into the choice of pledges for still another reason. A pledge can not be initiated unless her grades meet certain requirements.

"It's a bitter experience for a sorority to spend time and effort in rushing a girl, pledging her, and then not be permitted to initiate her because her grades are too low. So you may be sure we try to select those girls who will get by."

A talent for music, art, drama, the ability to wear clothes well, or skill at some athletic game is a great help to a girl who dreams of wearing a sorority pin.

"Those things help a student to lead a more active social life, and after all, sororities do have their lighter moments," concluded Miss Critchfield.

Trapper.

By Katherine Smith.

I wish I had the threads to spin
So subtle and secure a snare
That hearts like yours would slip within
Its meshes and be captured there.

And yet, if I could catch and hold
A heart that had been free before,
I think my interest would grow cold—
I wouldn't want it any more.

98 OUT OF 100 WOMEN REPORT BENEFIT

Mrs. M. D. Stevens of 53 Margaret Street, Binghamton, New York, says, "I took eight bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help me at pregnancy and I have taken it with three children. It made easier births."

"At the Change I had shaking spells and headaches. Your medicine helped me." — Mrs. Bert Buckham, Perry, New York.

Maturity... Maternity... Middle Age

At these three trying periods a woman needs Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Give it to your daughter when she comes to womanhood. Take it for strength before and after childbirth. Take it to tide you over Change of Life. Take it whenever you are nervous and rundown.

"My mother gave me the Vegetable Compound when I was thirteen. I took it before my daughter was born and I shall give it to her when she comes to womanhood." — Mrs. August Schumaker, 212 May Ave., Michigan City, Indiana.

Off-the-Face Hats Going Out; A Little Too Much Exposure

NEW YORK, April 19 (AP).—Milliners had two main objectives in mind today, the showing of the new warm weather models and a thorough check on which of their earlier models met with the most favor.

Only for the Young.

One observation was that the off-the-face styles did not make the hoped for hit. In explanation, it was said this was natural, as only a young and ingenuously pretty face can stand such exposure.

Young women fortunate enough to have faces of this description are wearing the little saucer-brimmed sailors that sit on the top of the head. Women who haven't prefer the wide, flared brim that is "cowboy" or "desperado," or anything else ingenious designers can suggest.

Straw is being worn much more than usual so early in the season, with navy blue and black the preferred colors. White is beginning to appear on these dark hats. Small bunches of flowers or fruits, used chiefly for color, are the trimmings most often seen.

A more formal type of beret is now being shown—a beret that can be worn with town as well as sports clothes.

"Head-Dress."

Two new off-the-face styles are a "head-dress" hat of braided mousseline with a tiny veil, and a taffeta sailor with an exaggerated brim that recalls a child's sailor hat. This last is worn pushed far back on the head.

A less trying sailor has a slightly turned-down brim and a wide ribbon band, and is worn with a rakish tilt.

Another version of the "cowboy" type is built along the lines of Napoleon's tricorne, except that it, too, is worn far back. It is trimmed with a cockade.

A hat of patent leather, also worn back on the head, and a little mob-cap affair of silk and ribbons, worn far to the front and leaving most of the hair exposed, are two new bonnets for those who must have something different.

The tricorne is playing a return engagement, and another new note is a hat that might be called a quadricorn—four corners. This hat, of rough straw, is practically untrimmed, and is worn far to one side, one corner over the right eye, the other corners falling where they may.

Traps, Snares and Pitfalls.

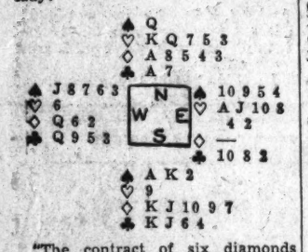
"Most heart-warming of all plays to the expert," writes Mr. Alphonse Moyse, jr., of New York City, transcending even his pleasure in inexorably squeezing or end-playing hapless opponents, is the successful trap or 'steal' maneuver. Actually, there is good reason for this, outside the atavistic urge to 'get away with murder.' The flawless execution of a mathematically certain coup of one type or another connotes technique greatly to be desired, but many of the clever bluff or trap plays employed either offensively or defensively are nothing less than psychological gems. Indeed, when it becomes vital to determine whether you are being crossed, double-crossed, or triple-crossed in the play of an abstruse hand, your problem demands more than mere Bridge knowledge and calls for an excursion into the metaphysical.

"Some of these ruses are simple and, through over-exploitation, usually ineffectual. Others snare the unwary and the inexperienced in pitfalls not easily to be avoided.

"Take, for example, the 'old army play' of leading the Knave of trumps holding Queen-Knave blank. Your chance of success in fooling any but the most gullible Declarer is practically negligible.

"Or, if holding the Queen of trumps underneath the Dummy's Ace and two small, the Declarer should lead the Knave through you, hoping for a cover, you'd feel downright insulted. No, these traps are rusted with age.

"But suppose you were Declarer on the following hand and had, as your left-hand opponent, not one of the masters of strategy and subterfuge but a sweet, innocent young lady?



"The contract of six diamonds needs no comment. It is certainly a legitimate one and should be a laydown. As Declarer, I was not even greatly alarmed when the aforementioned lady very promptly led a heart through my partner's original bid; but when the Ace won and a heart came back, again with disconcerting speed, I went into quite a huddle. After an appreciable time, during which the lady squirmed and seemed unusually impatient, I decided the original lead was really a singleton and therefore trumped with the King, intending to finesse the Knave. Greatly to my astonishment, no sooner had my card touched the table than the deuce of trumps was banged down by the lady, who at the same time made a gesture toward scooping up the trick. Of course, I broke her wrist and took the cards away from her, but I was very, very dubious when, having led the Knave of trumps from my hand, she followed with the six-spot. In my own defense, I must say that I searched her guileless blue eyes very carefully. Could there be, I pondered, diabolical deceit behind such lovely orbs? No—a thousand times no! She had merely, in her girlish enthusiasm and joi de vivre, been unable to restrain herself in her eagerness to ruff the second heart, and now the Queen of trumps must be blank in the East hand. I went up!—and made her a famous woman (and myself a misogynist)."

Radio Waves and Ripples

WASHINGTON radio dealers by this time should have the Atwater Kent Manfacturing Co.'s answer to most of your short-wave radio problems.

It is a world radio directory listing 300 international short-wave stations, 700 standard broadcasters in North America and, for people like our Aunt Sadie to whom the calling of the squad cars is still one of the more worth while experiences in radio, 150 police stations in the United States.

No better compendium of short-wave information do we hope to see. There is the name and location of the station, the call letters, the frequency in megacycles and, believe us, the broadcasting schedule in good, old United States Eastern Standard Time with a footnote:

"Subtract one hour for Central Time, two hours for Mountain Time and three hours for Pacific Time."

The entire directory has been compiled with gratifying simplicity. For instance, we are told that a megacycle is, after all, nothing more than 1,000 kilocycles, that a kilocycle is really 1,000 cycles, that if you divide 300,000 by frequency in kilocycles you get wave length in meters, &c.

And you needn't fear that after you have patiently and assiduously followed Atwater Kent instructions on tuning and elimination of electrical interefence there's going to be any difficulty about identifying stations. In the first place, most of the foreign short-wave stations announce in several languages, including English. Further than that, there is a compilation of the signature characterstics of the more important stations.

We learn that CNR, Rabat, Morocco, announces "Radio Rabat dans Moroc," and, if that doesn't help, uses the beat of a metronome during intermissions; that CTIAA, Lisbon, always broadcasts six cuckoo calls between selections; that SRI, Poznan, Poland, invariably comes out with "Hello, hello, Polski Radjc-Poznan."

GSA, Daventry, England, begins by announcing "London calling," then plays "God Save the King," and gives Big Ben chimes on the hour, just to make sure no one thinks he's listening to Poznan.

JUST as the Capitol has its "Little Congress" which periodically convenes members' secretaries for parliamentary practice, it also has its "Little LaGuardia."

He is Anthony J. Falzadore, whose member is Democrat Donald H. McLean, of New Jersey, so dubbed because his fire-eating, dramatic, for-the-underdog speeches remind the Hill of nothing so much as one-time Representative, now New York Mayor, Fiorello H. LaGuardia.

When the "Little Congress" meets in the caucus room of the old House Office Building at 8:30 Saturday night, "Little LaGuardia" will be there shooting at proponents of the Fletcher-Rayburn stock exchange control bill. N. B. C. will be there, too, for its first broadcast from the old caucus room and of "Little LaGuardia" and his colleagues—Haskell Tidwell, Falzadore's principal opponent and secretary to Representative Charles Colden, of California, and Ray Johnson, secretary to Representative Henry Arens, of Minnesota, speaker of the "Little Congress."

Verra, verra nice! That's what we said when Columbia sent us this picture of Elizabeth Day, "Forty-five Minutes in Hollywood" broadcaster. We thought you might think so, too. So we sent it along to the engravers marked "must."

You can't throw an organ very far.

The turning point in Hall's career came while he was appearing in vaudeville in La Crosse, Wis., billed as the "One-Man Musical Marvel." He played ten instruments. The act started as an experiment, but by the time it reached La Crosse, things had gone along so well that Hall had just about got over his early uncertainty and was beginning to feel a little cocky.

It was while he was playing the ukulele—his ninth instrument—during the last show that his exuberance first took objective form. He started whirling the uke. It slipped from his hands and splintered against the footlights.

WJSV is going to broadcast that opening Washington ball game if it takes all summer.

If it doesn't rain Tuesday, its own private sports announcer, Arch McDonald, will run out to Griffith Stadium with a mike. And if it rains Tuesday, he'll run out there Wednesday. And if it rains Wednesday, &c.

Columbia, apparently, feels the same way about opening games in Washington. The network's Ted Husing also will run out to Griffith Stadium with a mike.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Jocko Drives Their New Automowhay

The Creek Folks had a lot of fun on that trip through the woods to Cool Spring. They didn't know just what Blackie was planning to do, but they all seemed to feel that there was some good frolic in front of them. When they got most to Cool Spring, Jay Bird told them all to step out in the woods and stay there till he came for them. Then he flew over to the spring and sat in the big tree and waited for Mr. Man to come. It was a good long time before he heard some noise up the road, and then he saw Hee-Haw coming around a bend. Jay Bird sat right still up in the tree till Mr.

Man drove up with his wagon loaded down with things from the store. He stopped under the shade, gave Hee-Haw Donkey his dinner of hay and oats, and then got his own dinner pail and went down to the spring to eat his dinner. It was getting along in the afternoon, and he was pretty hungry and so he ate every bit of his dinner. Then he lit his pipe, and leaned back against the tree to fake a smoke. A nap always followed his smoke, and so he was soon fast asleep, snoring. Jay Bird flew back in the woods and told Blackie. "Jocko," said Blackie, "your hands are more like Mr. Man's, and you can drive better than anybody else, so you will drive Hee-Haw Donkey. Come on and let's get away before Mr. Man wakes up."

They hurried to the wagon, and Jocko jumped to the driver's seat, while all the others got in the back. Mr. Man had one of those old-fashioned country wagons with a top on it, and so they all felt like they were riding in a house. Jocko slapped the reins on Hee-Haw's back, and he started off up the creek.

Yes, they drove Hee-Haw right into the shallow water of the creek that had a bottom of rocks on which no sort of track could be made, and they turned up the stream toward Blackie's house, and kept in the water for ever so far before they turned out into the woods and headed for home.

In these days, when just everybody rides in something or other, it's hard to even think what it would be like to have to walk everywhere. But it isn't hard to think what a grand thing it would be to get something to ride in, if you never had done any riding! So it is easy enough to understand what a frolic it was to the Creek Folks to sit up there and ride in their own wagon. And Blackie just had to snicker a little when he thought of the way he was sitting up there in the same wagon that he had been made to pull loaded with wood, all that afternoon, and that he was driving the same donkey that got him into the trouble; but he was too good a sport to say anything about it. Yes, it did beat walking.

How to judge Scotch whisky

The expert tests Scotch whisky by the nose and by the palate. To tell a good whisky by the nose is rather difficult, unless you are an expert, but most people can rely on their palate, and if you have a sensitive palate you should have no difficulty in detecting the fine qualities of WHITE HORSE.

"Marrying" of WHITE HORSE

In the process of blending WHITE HORSE only the choicest makes of Scotch whisky are selected. These are matured for many years in sherry wood before blending. After the first blending operation WHITE HORSE is allowed to lie in wood for a further period, in order to allow the whisky to become properly "married". In course of time, the contents of the casks are reblended and again allowed to lie in the wood. The American public will without doubt appreciate all this time and care involved in the blending and reblending, or "marrying" of WHITE HORSE whisky before it is bottled. There is no variation in the quality of WHITE HORSE whether you obtain it in Glasgow, London, New York or San Francisco, and a more mellow, generous and refreshing spirit is not to be had. This Real Old Scotch, which is the senior Whisky of Scotland, will sustain the tone and dignity of any Club, or home however luxurious or modest.

Dancers Greet Cherry Blossoms at Sunrise; Hoofs (and Riders) at Horse Show

Hundreds of Washingtonians and visitors to the Capital gathered at the Tidal Basin at 6 a. m. yesterday for the opening of Washington's first annual Cherry Blossom Festival, with the Japanese sunrise ceremonial. Top, dancers spin their graceful tribute to the blooming trees, while crowd watches. The horse show yesterday afternoon attracted its thousands. Lower right, Mrs. I. T. Wyche, wife of Maj. I. T. Wyche, has the only "spill" of the show, but takes it gamely as her mount hits a hurdle. Lower left, the fox hunt is in progress, with the master of the hunt, D. C. Sands, following the hounds and two other riders.

Bright Floats To Grace Fete Parade Today

Pyrotechnic Display to Be Feature Tonight Near Monument.

History and fable, horticulture and the Birth of the Machine Age, international amity and a sly trace of Puck will characterize the parade of the Cherry Blossom Festival, which forms for its grand march at Third street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest today at 2:15 p. m.

Thirty floats, representing the cherry blossoms and patriotic motifs against a background as varying as a peek in a kaleidescone, will pass in review along Pennsylvania avenue to Fifteenth street, Constitution avenue and laong Seventeenth street to the Tidal Basin, where the marchers will circle the flower-bordered lake.

The parade officially begins the second day of the Capital's first annual Cherry Blossom Festival. The grand marshal is Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. A. (retired), who, as chairman of the parade committee, is largely responsible for the review.

Four Japanese Floats.

Four floats present pictures of Japan, and Japanese-American friendship. The first of these, contributed by the Palais Royal Department Store, reveals the landing of Perry in Japan in 1884, and the inauguration of peaceful trade relations and the exchange of ideas between the United States and the Orient.

A second Japanese float, given by the Washington hotels, will depict the opening of an enormous cherry blossom against a Nipponese background, with George Washington University coeds in costumes of the Far East, as attendants.

The beauties of the gardens of the Island Empire will be shown in the third boat, called "Springtime in Japan," which has been entered by the Gude Floral concern. The fourth float shows Japan presenting the cherry trees to the United States in 1912.

The history of the Nation is to be unfolded by the other floats, among which are "George Washington Chopping Down the Cherry Tree," "Washington at Mount Vernon," "The Spirit of Washington," "Gorge Washington—Flour Miller," "The Original Prairie Schooner," "Coal Mine," "Minute Men of '34," "Liberty Bell" and the "Development of the Automobile."

In addition to the flower-decked floats, there will be thousands of marchers in uniform, and many noted bands, including a unit of the Third Cavalry. From the District High School Cadets to battalions of the Regular Army, every military unit in Washington will be represented.

D. C. Families Asked to Give Data on Milk

AAA Behind Survey Aimed at Proving Curtailment Isn't Necessary.

Seven hundred questionnaires were ristributed in District schools yesterday to determine the amount of milk and dairy products consumed by representative families.

The survey is being conducted with the approval of the Board of Education by a committee headed by Mrs. Harvey Wiley. The survey is being made throughout the country by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration to demonstrate that curtailment of milk supplies is not necessary.

A cross-section opinion will be obtained in Washington through distribution of the questionnaires in elementary schools in three different communities. Answering of queries will be voluntary on the part of parents.

The following questions are asked: How many members of your household, including boarders, are regularly served with meals in your home? How much did you spend for food last week? How many members of the household group are under 5 and 16 and how many of the latter are in school?

How many quarts of milk were purchased last week? How many pounds of butter, pints of heavy cream, pints of medium and light, cans of evaporated or condensed milk, large and small cans?

Besides this, information is sought on how many quarts of milk, pounds of butter, pounds of evaporated milk and pounds of condensed milk were obtained from relief sources. The family income also is asked. Identity of families giving the information will not be revealed.

Horses, Horses—They Do Their Stuff at Cherry Fete

Polo Ponies, Chargers and Hunters Prance Their Best at Show.

By Marian May.

Polo ponies, officers' chargers, artillery horses, hunters—all carrying the full regalia and color of their particular capacities, were in the limelight yesterday before a background of Washington's Cherry Blossoms, as they participated in the Cherry Blossom Festival Horse Show.

They were an outstanding group of carefully selected horses, many of them well-known tanpark performers in local and nearby shows, and ranging in value from $500 to $10,000. Each horse was chosen on the merits of its being an excellent representative of its type and the usage to which it is put, either in civilian or military undertakings.

Immediately after the coronation of the Queen of the Festival, there was a horseman's parade, composed of representative animals depicting the use of the horse for pleasure, work, sport and war.

All Kinds of Horses.

Washington riding academies made up the first section, an exhibition of three-gaited park and road hacks. Two polo teams followed. Bay Belgians—horses that deliver the milk in the morning—hitched to their milk wagons, were the next unit, followed by a team of Mrs. John Hay Whitney's celebrated gray Percherons, and four huge Clydesdales from Belair, the Bowie estate of William Woodward.

The military exhibition was led by a typical officer's trooper, and included light and heavy machine gun packs, and a pack radio system. A team of Army mules brought up the rear.

The horsemen's parade was brought to a close by six hunt teams of three horses each, ridden in hunt colors. The Cobbler Hunt, of Delaplane, Va., was represented by Col. George S. Patton, Mrs. Patton and their daughter, Beatrice—always a familiar little group at the Virginia horse shows and hunter trials. The Redland Hunt, of Rockville, received wide acclaim from the spectators with three large, handsome dappled grays, ridden by Tom Mott, M. F. H., with the huntsman and whip—all in scarlet.

The Riding and Hunt Club, of Washington, was also represented, as well as Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, of Warrenton, Va., and E. L. Palmer, of Barcroft, Va.

Especially interesting to the spectaors was E. R. Colbert's hunt team of small gray Hackney-Welsh ponies, ridden in full hunt costume by Dicky Kelley and Jimmy and Ellie Wood Keith. Sighs of admiration were heard as these small children rode their sturdy little mounts to imaginary hounds.

In spite of the bad footing in the ring, the horses covered the course well, many of them turning in faultless performances. The excellent hunters of Col. Patton and family, Mrs. Winmill and W. F. Burrows were foremost among the performers.

Dogs to Have Their Day.

As if to complete the hunting picture, the finest pack of American foxhounds in the country was paraded around the ring. They were the hounds of the Middleburg Hunt, of which D. C. Sands is M. F. H. The pack has won three times at the Bryn Mawr Hound Show, which is the leading show of its kind in the United States.

The pack, as explained to the audience by Maj. Wilfrid Blunt, M. F. H. of the Riding and Hunt Club, is the outcome of 30 years of breeding in the Middleburg Kennels. The manner in which the hounds remained close to the huntsman and whips, who accompanied them in the ring on horseback, and the care the horses exercised in not injuring them, even as the group galloped out of the ring, was an inspiring sight.

Queen Crowned At Cherry Fete; Throngs Curtsy

Beatrice Phillips and Julia Zimmerman.

The queen and her attendants, who also included 10-year-old Betsey Walker, crown bearer, and Elizabeth Goring Bliss and Grace Colgate Rumbough, bearers of her train, held the spotlight as the afternoon events opened on the old polo field east of the basin.

But with the coronation, interest was shifted to the show ring where an instructive and thrilling horse show kept spectators on their feet with admiration until the last event was finished.

The great afternoon pageant opened with a fanfare from the trumpets of four Marine bandsmen. Then the queen and her train were driven into the quadrangle of onlookers preceded by the blare of music from the Third Cavalry Band from Fort Myer.

After the procession circled the field, the queen was met by District Commissioners George E. Allen and Melvin C. Hazen. They assisted her and her attendants from their cars and escorted them to the throne, decorated with blossoms.

Coronation Ritual.

Cameras clicked as Dr. Dudley placed the narrow circlet of blossoms on Miss Roosevelt's head, with the words:

"The Cherry Blossoms tell that spring has come, that earth has awakened from her winter's sleep. Their beauty is God's covenant with man for glorious years ahead. And so youth is radiant promise to a waiting world of better, happier, holier things to come. Now, therefore, lovely maid, I crown you Queen and bid you rule with courage and with love."

The Queen replied:

"I take the oath, O Priest, and pray that God, who made the glory of these blossoms rare, may guide my steps with such a sure control that I may carry out His great design."

With this the queen and her group took their seats on the throne, where they remained and later greeted the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito and other notables.

Later, when lowering skies again threatened, the horse show was interrupted to permit the royal group to leave. They were escorted to their cars by the District Commissioners.

Miss Roosevelt's gown was white with a long train. Her attendants, in groups of four, were clad in what a feminine spectator said were flesh, pink and rose. The queen was bare-headed, while the attendants wore wide-brimmed brown hats.

As the queen was seated, the horse show began with a parade of hunters, polo ponies, draft horses, military mounts, including cavalry and artillery horses and children's mounts.

All Events Broadcast.

All through the parade and the show events which followed, there was broadcast the background and history of events and types of horses. This was done by Maj. C. L. Scott, who headed the committee in charge, and Wayne Dinsmore.

The show events included jumping for hunters in men's and women's classes; children's jumping, and a feature exhibition of daring riding by Fort Myer soldiers.

4 Defendants In Dirt Suit Are Eliminated

By direction of Justice James M. Proctor, in the District Supreme Court, a jury yesterday voted to hold not answerable four of the six defendants named by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman who charged that they had dumped 4,300 cubic yards of yellow clay on her estate.

Only Raymond T. Baker, former director of the mint, and Joseph P. Maher, a contractor, remain to face possible liability for the dumping. Mrs. Hariman is asking that she be given $25,000 damages because she says the one-time glories of her estate were destroyed by the huge piles of dirt placed on it while she was in Europe.

Those who were freed of liability by direction of Justice Proctor were Mrs. Baker, William P. Lipscomb, J. H. Small & Sons and Logan Pingree, another contractor.

Baker, in testifying, denied he had authorized any one to dump the dirt on his neighbor's premises. He was quoted, though, by Mrs. J. A. Van Kaathoven, 1155 Sixteenth street northwest, a daughter of the late William Belknap, as telling her that he dumped the dirt there, or caused it to be dumped, because he and Mrs. Harriman were good friends and he did not think she would mind.

Werber Leads Batting Attack as Red Sox Trim Nats, 5-4 and 7-3

Solters Decides First With Homer in Ninth; 35,000 View Nightcap

Washington Is Held to Five Hits in Finale; Prim Is Pounded.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor, The Post).

FENWAY PARK, Boston, Mass., April 19.—The doings today are sad to report, folks. The worm turned, or something, and the Red Sox, perennial doormat of the American League, rose up and smote the champion Nats twice in the same day, unceremonially booting them out of the league lead they were enjoying this morning.

Paul Revere, who gave the Boston ownership the excuse to schedule two games and draw 42,000 Patriots' Day fans to the new ball yard, was a piker in the riding business compared to the new American League ball, which was riding up against the fences and out of the park all day as the Red Sox collected a pair of victories.

Thirteen Hits in Afternoon.

With the blood of the Nats on their palates after a sensational 5-to-4 victory in the morning game before 7,000 fans, the Red Sox came back for the kill this afternoon before 35,000 witnesses and lashed out a 7-to-3 triumph, while the fences stood up miraculously under their 13-hit barrage.

That afternoon game was a foregone conclusion after the socking Sox had pounded Rookie Ray Prim for seven runs in the first five innings, but that morning game provided the high drama of the day.

I wouldn't say the Nats' defeat came without warning despite the fact that they were summarily dealt with by a Boston home run in the ninth, when the score showed a 4-to-4 tie.

Solters Hits Homer.

Big Julius Solters, the $40,000 purchase from Baltimore, slugged his way into the hearts of Boston fans this morning. Al Crowder was pitching in the ninth, having relieved the faltering Walter Stewart in the seventh, and, as I was saying, the score was tied and Solters was at bat.

Solters' game-wining home run didn't come without warning, as I told you. Crowder's first pitch he belted high, wide and handsomely over the left field fence only to find the cheers of Boston fans glut in their collective throats when the ball went foul by a matter of inches. It was a close call for the Nats.

Crowder worked the count to two and three on Big Solters, carefully pitching to the outside corner to avoid a legitimate home run. But the next pitch came down the well-known alley. It never reached the plate. On a line Solters' bat smashed the ball to dead center field, high over the upturned head of Fred Schulte, on toward the furthest reaches of the park, and over the fence for a home run.

That ball game was over.

Held to Five Hits.

Joe Cronin tried to get away with some rookie pitching in the afternoon game, but Ray Prim and Mark Filley were quickly initiated

Vosmik's Long Homer Wins For Tribe

Browns Bow, 3-2, After Drive Scores 2 Runs; 400-Foot Clout.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 19 (AP).—A line drive by Joe Vosmik that traveled more than 400 feet into the left-center bleachers for a home run gave Cleveland a 3-to-2 victory over St. Louis in an American League game here today.

Vosmik's clout in the eighth inning also brought in Pytlak, who had doubled to left. Manager Walter Johnson used three pitchers, jerking Mel Harder for a pinch hitter, and then replacing Winegarner with Connally after Winegarner had walked two men in the first of the ninth.

PHILADELPHIA, April 19 (AP).—The Yankees and the Athletics continued the home run bombardment today with the New York club clouting three Philadelphia pitchers for a 10-to-4 victory in the final game of the series. The Yanks took two of the three games.

Bill Dickey hit his second homer of the season with two aboard in the second and Tony Lazzeri hit a four-bager with one mate on base in the seventh for the big blows of the Yanks' 13. Bob Johnson poled two homers for the A's, but both came with bases empty.

Danny MacFayden went the route for New York although touched for 11 hits.

Cubs Rout Reds To Sweep Series

Chicago Wins, 4-1, With Malone in Form.

Cincinnati, April 19 (AP).—The jinx that Lon Warneke put on the Cincinnati Reds in that almost history-making opening game, lasted through today, and the Chicago Cubs won, 4 to 1, to make a clean sweep of the opening series. As in the other two encounters, it was pitching that spelled the Reds' downfall. Pat Malone was in fine fettle, letting the Cincinnatians down with but five scattered blows.

Giants Win 3d In Row; Beat Phils, 2-0

Parmelee Gives 3 Hits in 7 1-3 Innings, but Walks 5, Hits 1.

Terry's Homer in First One of Champions' Four Bingles.

NEW YORK, April 19 (AP).—The world champion Giants scored a typical Giant victory today as they downed the Phillies, 2 to 0, for their third straight victory of the new season.

The Giants collected only four hits from the offerings of fidgety Phil Collins, but they were enough to back up the hurling of Roy Parmelee and Adolf Luque. A dark day proved just suited to Parmelee's speedball and he gave the Phils only three hits in the 7 1-3 innings he worked. Luque granted two more.

Walks Five, Hits One.

Wildness caused the Giant flinger's removal in the eighth after he had walked five men and hit one batsman. The Phils had two men on the sacks, through their third hit and a pass when Luque came in to quell the incipient uprising. Parmelee was the first of three Giant starting pitchers who failed to go the route.

Manager Bill Terry did enough to win the game in the first inning when he clouted one of Collins' pitches into the upper tier of the right field stands for a home run. It was his first hit of the season. The other Giant run was unearned. It came in the fifth after a two-base error by Lou Chiozza, rookie infielder. Chiozza heaved the ball over first after taking Johnny Vergez' grounder and the runner reached second. After Paul Richards walked, Parmelee drove a single to center to bring in the run.

Dies on Third Base.

The Phils staged a mild uprising in the ninth when Manager Jimmy Wilson doubled for his second hit and Harvey Hendrick advanced him to third with a pinch single, but he died there when Dick Bartell forced Hendrick.

Birkhofer Hero on Mound; Hallahan Hard Hit.

St. Louis, April 19 (AP).—Birkhofer, driven from the mound by the St. Louis Cardinals two days ago, subdued the Redbirds today while his mates went on a batting rampage, and Pittsburgh took the odd game of the series, 14 to 4.

Bill Hallahan, St. Louis ace, was the first victim of the visitors, who garnered a total of 19 hits. Hallahan retired in the fifth after five hits and two errors gave the Pirates six runs. Flint Rhem, who succeeded him, was batted hard in the sixth, Pittsburgh getting four runs on five hits and an error. Mooney finished for St. Louis.

Tiger Oarsmen Arrive for Navy Race

ANNAPOLIS, April 19 (Spl.).—Varsity and junior varsity oarsmen of Princeton, who will oppose like groups of Annapolis midshipmen in eight-oared crew races on Severn River Saturday, to open the local aquatic season, arrived in Annapolis this afternoon in time to put in their first practice brush over the up-stream race course.

Both the Tiger and Tar oarsmen are reported in fair early season form, notwithstanding setbacks from continued unfavorable weather, and rowing fans anticipate two lively brushes. Interest in the varsity race is particularly keen, as the Jungaleers gave the Middies their only reverse last season, hence the locals are particularly anxious to turn the tables. Statistics show that the Tiger seniors are a formidable group, averaging 180¾ pounds, 5 pounds greater than the Middies. The poundage in the Jayvee boats will be practically even, Princeton averaging 177¾ to Navy's 177.

Show Good Form.

All four of the crews displayed good form as they went over the course today. Conditions were propitious, as there were only light winds, hence the river was practically calm, although it was a trifle cool.

Kate, Paying $24.20, Impressive in Debut as Four-Year-Old at Havre de Grace

Mare Is Nose Victor Over Ilchester

Source Circle, at $110, in Final Is Fifth Long-Shot Victor.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent)

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, Md., April 19.—Kate, a filly with a simple name but a make-up that points to speed, went to the post today for the first time this year and after a grueling stretch duel was brought back to the winner's circle. The 4-year-old representative of the Howe Stable won by a nose from Ilchester, owned by Mrs. Elmer Trueman, of Washington, and operated by hre husband. The Pelican, always a bridesmaid but never a bride in Maryland racing this spring, was installed the favorite at odds-on but finished a laboring third. Syenite and Dyak completed the field.

Rain began to fall before the first race and the drying process, going on for two days, was erased. At the hour for the feature the course was sloppy. Despite the rough going, Kate was clocked in 1:13 2-5 under a vigorous ride by Apprentice Jockey Bobby Merritt.

The Pelican began as if he was to rout the jinx that has followed him in this State. He opened up a short lead on Syenite. However, he faltered with the pay-off just ahead and Ilchester came up to take the lead at the eighth pole. The Trueman entry might have won had he not stumbled slightly in the final drive. Under hard urging, Kate was closing like the wind and got up as the pair passed the wire.

Vote Wins Close Race.

The finish of the 6-furlong opener was so close that a number of onlookers disagreed with the official placing. Vote, paying $14.40, was awarded a nose decision over the heavily backed Portden, with Merovech, the third horse, a full ten lengths behind. Portden, although pocketed at the far turn, took the lead from Suspicious on the bend. Vote, kept close up from the start, came fast on the outside and caught Portden right on the wire.

Synod, even-money favorite, won the second event, for 2-year-old platers, after a hard drive with Back Fence. The latter might have won but for stumbling while catching the winner right near the finish. A half length divided the pair, while Exhibit lost second money by two lengths. Synod took the lead in a few strides and gamely held to a narrow advantage under strong handling.

William Ziegler, jr., trotted out a new juvenile, Gold Buckle, in the third dash, and the youngster showed a smart effort to drive home by a length. Black Gift took the place from Our Mae by nearly two lengths. Gold Buckle, a son of the fleet Polydor, that has some of the appearance of his daddy, shot to the front shortly after the start and never was in real danger. He paid $14.40 and made the fast time of 0:54 3-5 in the going. Black Gift had a rough trip and finished stoutly.

Royal Durbar Scores.

Royal Durbar, beaten off in his previous start, scored a driving triumph in the fifth contest, returning $13.30. The colt forced Electric Gaff's pace and wore the pacemaker down in the final strides to register by a head. Electric Gaff liked the footing, but he was unable to stave off the winner's closing bid. War Tide, badly outrun for 5 furlongs, closed ground when fully in his stride, finishing two lengths away from the place.

Spartan Lady was backed down to $3.70 for $2 in the sixth. The filly won, but not as her odds would indicate. She barely got up to beat Dark Fey, while the later was only a half length before Hobnail. The latter, a rank outsider, led the pack into the last furlong, where he faltered. Folking, which ran against the topnotchers back in 1932, came back to competition as an 8-year-old, but the veteran was not up to the mark.

Four horses passed the judges noses apart in the finale. Source Circle, ridden by G. Haines, stuck her nose in front and paid $110.60 for a $2 ticket. Barkantine was second, with Peedeeque third.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

When you are up in the air, the shadow the plane in which you are riding appears to be a mere speck on the landscape; when you are on the ground the shadow of a passing plane seems much larger than the ship itself. Yet neither of these assumptions is correct—the shadow of an airplane is always exactly the same size when the sun is at a given place in the sky, and, strange as it seems, the shadow of a plane in level flight when the sun is directly overhead is exactly the same size as the plane.

The reason for this is the fact that the rays of the sun are deemed to be parallel when they strike the earth. Because of this the location of the object casting the shadow does not affect the size of the shadow.

It is well known to physics students that the shadow of an object varies in size according to its location relative to the source of light and the screen on which the shadow is cast. If a one-foot ruler is held midway between the light and the screen it will cast a shadow two feet long.

Consider, however, that the source of sunlight is more than 90,000,000 miles away, and that the altitude of an airplane is seldom more than two or three miles. In theory an airplane would have to be about 45,000,000 miles above the surface of the earth to cast a shadow twice its normal size.

Havre de Grace Race Track, April 19.

Dear Al:

Early arrivals at this course today were treated to an eyeful of C. V. Whitney's Equipoise in action. The "Big Train" will start an attack on Sun Beau's money winning record Saturday in the Philadelphia Handicap and he appeared to be fit for a hard race. Sonny Workman, who will ride Equipoise again this year, brought the horse on the track and broke him at the mile pole. The clockers had spied the pair and a score of thumbs set watches in motion. He made the first turn and showed 24 flat for the quarter. Three furlongs were taken in 36 3-5 and then the half-mile in 49 seconds flat. At six furlongs, the clockers eyed 1:14 just as Trainer Healy waved to Workman to pull up. Sonny pulled in but Equipoise went to seven furlongs in 1:28 2-5 and the mile was clocked in 1:41 2-5. The track was in fair condition.

BILL.

First race—Whoa Back turned in a sharp effort in his last and I expect him to come right back with another winning performance. Hilise was a bang-up second recently and should make the top one hustle. Paper Moon for the show.

Second race—Come Seven ran a splendid third at Bowie, her first outing since Jefferson Park. Jimmy Hunter will ride tomorrow and I see no reason for mistakes. Miss Glace will be favored by the going and should dispose of Idle Along in the battle for place honors.

Third race—My Boss has shoown good form consistently since racing returned to Maryland. He must take care of Bride Elect and Trillium, a pair of recent winners, but I believe he can turn the trick.

Fourth race—Rhadamanthus was tightened in that race at Bowie and closed fast. The added route tomorrow should agree with this fellow. A good ride will bring us a winner, I do believe. Round Table and Banners Flying appear to have an adge on the others.

Fifth race—Dark Conquest will be making his first start since Hialeah, but Clocker Mike informs me this fellow is ready. Haggerson will like the off track and should be no worse than second. One Chance for the show end.

Sixth race—Catwalk reached winning form at Bowie and finds a field here that he should defeat. All Rowes may run her best race and find a place in the money picture. Harky was tipped in that last. Dangerous tomorrow.

Seventh race—Mr. Hyde defeated maiden sprinters in Prince Georges County. Asked to go the route here. I believe he can get home in front of Rego. Biff for the show.

Alexandria Trims Training Nine, 8-4

Alexandria High's strong nine turned in an 8-to-4 victory over National Training School yesterday on the Trainers' diamond, but only after overcoming unexpectedly stubborn opposition on the part of the local boys.

National took a one-run advantage in the first, but Alexandria snatched the lead in the third with a two-run spurt after having tied the score in the second. The Virginians staged a four-run attack in the seventh to clinch the issue. Chilcotte, of Alexandria, took the batting honors with a perfect average in three official appearances at the plate. Kiskie and Ergovich led the Trainer's offensive, each with two out of three.

VOTE, kept under urging while on outside of leaders in early stages, responded strongly under vigorous handling and, in a game finish, was up in the concluding strides. PORTDEN, rated in near pursuit of SUSPICIOUS, was in close quarters on inside, came around to take a brief lead when straightened into the home stretch and fought it out gamely. MEROVECH, forwardly placed, continued gamely.

SYNOD began quickly, displayed good ability in the footing to maintain a slight lead, saved ground and under strong urging outstayed BACK FENCE. The latter secured racing room between the leaders at the stretch turn, drew to the pacemaker and fought it out stoutly approaching the finish. EXHIBIT raced strongly in the early stages and continued gamely when placed to punishment. PERKIN, a forward factor in the early stages, moved up with a menacing effort at the stretch turn, but swerved out badly to lose ground. He weakened thereafter. KINDRED SPIRIT went evenly. The others could not enter into contention.

THIRD RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. The Century. Purse, $800; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good (from gate). Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 3:35. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLD BUCKLE, $14.40, $9.50, $4.60; BLACK GIFT, $7.40, $4.60; OUR MAE, $3.80.

GOLD BUCKLE displayed rapid speed to reach the front, opened up a long lead when placed to mild punishment in the closing furlong, then had to be ridden out sharply to resist BLACK GIFT. The latter, squeesed back at the turn, went to the outside and closed full of run. OUR MAE was strongly handled from the beginning. She showed a good effort after meeting with early interference. CHEKA was stoutly handled from the beginning and had no mishaps. NO SAINT raced in the thick of contention, but tired badly in the final drive. TEN LAW was forced to race wide from the beginning. He showed a good performance. TUTTICURIO had early feet. SURVEYOR was never a factor. CHEWSIE and BEGINNERS BAIT were in much trouble directly after the start.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good (from gate). Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:14½. Winner, Howe Stable's ch. f. KATE, steadied within striking distance of the leaders, secured racing room between the leaders during the stretch drive after being interfered with slightly when ILCHESTER sprawled, came strongly under stout handling and was up in the last strides. ILCHESTER, restrained off the pace, gained fast to reach the leader when entering the home stretch, lost ground but held on determinedly after sprawling badly in the closing sixteenth. THE PELICAN was rushed hard to take a brief early lead, shook off SYENITE, then faltered badly in the closing furlong. SYENITE raced strongly from the beginning. DYAK was badly outrun from the beginning.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good (from gate). Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:45. Winner, F. J. Kern's b. c. Stocks Ignore Wheat Loss; Close Higher Prices Continue Firm as Sales Volume Drops to 1,335,520 Shares.

New York, April 19 (AP).—Security markets again had to face weakness of grains today, and again they were not much disturbed thereby.

The tone of stocks was rather firm, barring the break in Canadian gold issues.

A mild flurry of selling put common stocks a shade lower when the Chicago cereals were at their worst; however, the ability of that market to rally from its low, as well as the absence of any real pressure against equities, prompted some buying toward the close and the final average was up slightly. There were a few strong spots. Turnover amounted to 1,335,520 shares.

Tax on Gold.

Canada's 10 per cent tax on gold brought brisk offerings of stocks in companies identified with the Dominion's mining industry, their extreme loss ranging from 1 to 3 points, part of which was recovered.

Auburn Automobile lost several points following publication of a report showing net loss of more than $800,000 for the three months ended February 28, the deficiency being larger than was recorded a year ago. National Lead slumped on news of the management's opposition to a stock split-up at this time.

U. S. Rubber first preferred jumped more than 5 points and the common was up nearly 1. Several other preferreds showed strength. Rails made moderate improvement, reflecting traffic gains and hopes that the wage controversy would be amicably settled. Steels were narrow.

Motors Change Little.

The motor shares had narrow changes on the day and the same was largely true of utilities. American Telephone yielded a fraction of yesterday's advance.

Liquid Carbonic, Coca Cola, Hercules Powder, First National Stores and Hazel Atlas Glass rose about 1 to 2. U. S. Smelting and International Silver were higher in contrast to weakness of the gold stocks.

The conference on proposed silver legislation has been deferred to later in the week.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

By Ralph West Robey.

Advance reports on the preliminary findings of the Advisory Review Board—the Darrow Committee—appear to promise still further trouble for the NRA. As given in the press the committee has concluded that the codes it has examined "are developing a monopolistic trend and are doing injury to the small industrialist and business men." Unfortunately, the facts and line of argument upon which it has reached this conviction are not yet public. They are supposed to be given to the President this week and to be made public at his pleasure. Presumably this will be only a matter of days, however, for it is unthinkable that such a report would be held secret.

The seriousness of such a charge by this committee, needless to say, does not rest upon its novelty. There have been many people more or less familiar with the operations of the codes that have come to the same conclusions and a few of them, notably Senators Borah and Nye, have charged openly that through the creation of monopolies the NRA was ruining a large number of small business units. As a matter of fact, it is difficult to see how anyone who has given any attention to the provisions of some of the major codes could reach any conclusion other than that they establish a monopoly. It is certain, therefore, that the committee will find lots of support for its general thesis.

Relation to Public In Important Aspect.

Such support in itself, however, is relatively unimportant. We always have had monopolies in this country and we always have had some people that were convinced that they were bad. The significant aspect of the problem, therefore, is not the monopolistic tendency of NRA, but whether this tendency has resulted in combinations that were beneficial to the public welfare.

In answering this question it is evident that the burden of proof rests upon the defenders of NRA. The adoption of a policy of enforced combination marked a clear departure from our past theories on business ownership and operation. Further, it was a departure that was not anticipated by the public in the brief discussion of NIRA previous to the passage of the bill last May. Quite the contrary, it was assumed in that discussion that the codifying of industry was to be a voluntary move on the part of business and that it would take place only in those industries especially hard hit by the depression.

Scarcely was the bill on the books, however, before it began to be used as a lever for improving business. Technically it still was a matter of free choice whether an industry drew up a code, but in practice it became a virtual business necessity. This change was accomplished by the spending of hundreds of thousands of dollars for publicity about the NRA, the pleas of Hugh Johnson to the public to boycott anyone not flying the blue eagle, and the constant threat that if everyone did not submit a code the Government would use the power given it in the NRA to impose one.

Changed Our Economic System in Basic Manner.

With extraordinary rapidity, therefore, we converted our economic system from one characterized by competition into one in which almost every industry was combined and forced to act as a unit. More bluntly, we created a situation where industry after industry was bound together in such a manner that it could gouge the public through higher prices. And we did this in a manner which made the raising of prices a relatively safe move on the part of such industry. Heretofore, and even in the days before antitrust legislation, any monopoly or group in an industry that tried raising prices always had the threat of other units taking their business away through lower prices. Under the NRA the tendency has been to remove this threat through making the industry operate as a whole.

It is true, of course, that such a situation is not found under all codes. It is found in enough cases, nevertheless, to justify a thorough overhauling of the NRA. If the Darrow committee succeeds in forcing such a revision it will be performing a major public service.

Bonds Persist In Advancing To New Highs

Profit-Taking Is Overcome as Sales Mount to $15,936,000.

New York, April 19 (AP).—Bonds edged forward again today, many issues marking up the familiar "new highs" despite the appearance of considerable profit taking.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues advanced two-tenths of a point to 87.7, another post-1931 top.

Traders Become Cautious.

Traders were a little more cautious, due probably to unsettlement in the commodities markets, but most offerings were absorbed without difficulty.

Secondary issues continued to attract the more speculative buying, although price investment loans were not neglected. Gains of fractions to a point or more were the rule.

The rails, for a change, were a little behind the utilities and industrials. Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron 5s and 6s were in exceptional demand at advances of 2 and 3½ points, respectively, and Walworth 6½s jumped 6½ points on a few sales. International Paper 6s and Kelly Springfield 6s were up about 2 points each.

Among Other Gainers.

Among the other more active gainers were some loans of American Chain, American Rolling Mill, American Sugar Refining, American Water Works, American Writing Paper, Bethlehem Steel, Childs Co., Chile Copper, Colorado Industrial, Columbia Gas, Consolidated Gas, General Cable, Goodyear, Hudson Coal, International Hydro-Electric, Laclede Gas, Milwaukee Electric, New Orleans Public Service, North American Edison, Philadelphia Co., Skelly Oil, Studebaker, U. S. Rubber, Union Electric and Western Union.

There was a large turnover of New York traction bonds at gains of 1 to 3 points.

The majority of U. S. Government securities were somewhat lower, and foreign obligations were mixed. German government 5½s lost 1 and the 7s were off 2⅜ points. At the same time German Central Agricultural Bank bonds were up fractionally to more than a point. Nord Railway 6½s held a gain of 5½, and issues of Dutch East Indies, France and Peru were firm. The Argentines and Brazilians sagged.

Curb Closes Mixed in Gold Stocks Selling

Utilities, Oils and Alcohols Turn Irregular; Sales, 355,000 Shares.

New York, April 19 (AP).—The curb market resisted rather impressively today in the face of heavy selling in gold mining stocks and weakness of gains. Final quotations among utilities, oils and alcohols showed minor irregularity.

The trading pace was again stepped up moderately and transactions which approximated 355,000 shares about equalled yesterday's total.

Lake Shore Mines dropped 4½ points. Wright-Hargreaves, Hudson Bay, Pioneer Gold and Hollinger lost fractions to around a point. Hiram Walker dipped a point, while Gulf Oil and American Light & Traction eased fractionally.

Thermoid preferred rose 5½ in a small transfer. Dow Chemical and Flintkote "A" gained about 2 each. Electric Bond & Share, Standard Oil of Indiana, Swift & Co., Charis Corporation and U. S. Foil "B" were steady to firm.

Municipal Bankruptcy Bill Hit As License to Possible Abuses

By Anna P. Youngman.

The Sumpers municipal bankruptcy bill is among the important items of unfinished business on the Congressional calendar. It is to be hoped that it will stay there for the rest of the session, because the economic and political consequences of extending Federal bankruptcy laws to local governmental units are too serious to be invoked hastily even in an emergency.

Experts are sharply divided in their views concering the merits of the proposed legislation. Advocates emphasize the need for Federal intervention, because of the constitutional prohibition against State laws impairing the obligation of contracts. Opponents maintain that the Sumners bill is itself unconstitutional and say that its passage would result in serious invasion of State autonomy, or such vestiges of State autonomy as remain.

In reply to the argument that a Federal bankruptcy law provides the only practicable method of coercing recalcitrant creditor groups into accepting reasonable settlements, it is contended that litigation would not be obviated under the Sumners bill, or similar measures. Moreover, objections are raised to an extension of bankruptcy legislation to public borrowers on the ground that it strikes at the foundations of public credit, which rests upon the taxing power. Prof. W. A. Sturges, of the Yale Law School, in testifying against the bill said: "I believe that if Congress is going to act under the bankruptcy act for municipal debt relief, that relief should be made available only to a State committee that is put onto the job of managing and controlling municipal finances and indebtedness. The plan as now set up spells too much delay, too much expense and is predicated on the ability of the overcrowded Federal courts to accomplish quite beyond any reasonable expectations an overnight solution of an exceeding complicated problem."

Importance of Municipal Defaults Is Exaggerated.

The volume of municipal defaults is undoubtedly very large, but its importance has been exaggerated. The principal of all outstanding obligations of municipalities and other local taxing divisions in default has been estimated to run from about $1,500,000,000 to over $2,000,000,000. The estimates, however, include issues of municipalities that have defaulted on only part of their indebtedness. Moreover, many of the existing defaults are due to temporary embarrassments that will be corrected in course of time. Bank closings have tied up public funds, the depression has resulted in excessive tax delinquencies, short-term credits in anticipation of tax receipts have been difficult or impossible to obtain, and refunding operations have been prevented or hampered by the demoralized state of the investment market.

Already there are gratifying indications of improvement in the financial affairs of many municipalities. Tax collections in over 50 cities located in 15 different States are much better than a year ago, according to the finance department (taxation division) of the United States Chamber of Commerce. Efforts to reduce expenses and introduce economies into local government are beginning to strengthen the budgetry position of many hard-pressed communities.

Well-Founded Fears Of Abuses Under Law.

There is a well-founded fear that Federal legislation enabling local governments to invoke Federal bankruptcy laws might increase the temptation to scale down indebtedness instead of encouraging the execution of plans calling for constructive economy and prompt collection of taxes. For example, a handbill endorsing a Federal bankruptcy law for local governments was recently distributed among the farmers of a Midwestern State telling them that the measure would "allow your county and school district to go into bankruptcy and cut down your taxes."

The safeguards contained in the Sumners bill, which requires any reorganization plan to be approved by creditors representing two-thirds of the indebtedness affected, are cited as proof that no arbitrary debt reductions would be tolerated. Nevertheless, bankruptcy legislation that facilitates systematic scaling of public obligations weakens the incentive to push constructive reforms designed to reduce excessive debt, guarantee economical administration of municipal affairs and prevent a repitition of those mistakes and excesses which lead to defaults.

Even if a Federal bankruptcy law should facilitate a certain amount of unavoidable debt scaling, the gains would be bought at a high price by shifting responsibility from the States and localities where it rightly belongs to Federal courts that are not equipped to deal constructively with the problems of local finance. A spokesman for the American Bar Association which is opposed to the Sumners bill says a "bad precedent, a bad policy in American economics, in American law and in American politics would be established if the hitherto inviolable character of municipal or governmental evidences of debt should be put in the same class as private debts."

Cotton Regains Part of Losses In Late Trading

May Closes at 11.59 as General Market Falls 5 to 8 Points.

New York, April 19 (AP).—A decline of approximately $1.25 a bale in cotton under further liquidation and scattered selling promoted by the weakness of wheat, was followed by rapid rallies during the late trading today.

July contracts, after selling off to 11.50 during the early afternoon or 23 points net lower, closed at 11.70, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 5 to 8 points.

The opening was 6 to 8 points lower in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables. Initial offerings were taken by trade buying in the near months, and there was a scattered demand for later deliveries.

Liquidation Continues.

This was supplied on bulges of a point or two, however, and the market soon showed renewed easiness under a continuance of liquidation and scattered selling. This became more active as the extreme weakness developed in the wheat market, and some stop orders were uncovered on the afternoon decline which extended to 11.41 for May and 11.60 for October, making net losses of about 24 to 27 points and new low ground for the movement.

Offerings then tapered off and the market rallied rapidly later in the afternoon on covering or rebuying, attributed partly to the improved technical position and a bullish view of some reports reaching here with reference to the possibility of silver legislation in Washington.

Prices recovered some 18 to 20 points of their early losses and closed within a point or two of the best for the day.

Exports today, 15,039, making 6,389,907 so far this season. Port receipts, 11,068. United States port stocks, 3,064,982.

U. S. Shipping Found Making Real Progress

New York, April 19.—A distinctly optimistic outlook for American shipping is reflected in a maritime survey made public by H. Gerrish Smith, president of the National Council of American Shipbuilders.

Smith's report was announced in connection with the annual meeting of the council, being held today at the Whitehall Club. The report shows gains both in the building and operation of ships, in ship repairing, in Panama Canal traffic and in the interchange of commodities without which shipping can not exist. All available indices indicate a substantial upturn over the figures for corresponding months of last year.

"There has been a distinct revival in shipping, both foreign and domestic, during the past few months," Smith declared. "This is an encouraging omen for those engaged in shipbuilding, ship repairing and ship operation.

Unfinished Ship Values.

"The value of unfinished ship construction has materially increased within the past year. Business on hand aggregated but $29,000,000 as of January 1, 1933. The beginning of 1934 found this figure increased to $147,000,000. The bulk of the business, of course, is accounted for by contracts for 21 naval vessels awarded to seven private yards last August. Contracts involving the construction of 14 vessels for the Coast Guard and one for the lighthouse service have also been awarded.

"The number of workers in ship construction has practically doubled during the past year. Employment in 20 representative yards reached a low level of 10,411 last July. On September 30 this number had increased to 14,950 and by the end of the year stood at 17,000."

"Ship repair yards also report a substantial improvement during recent months," Smith said. This applies to yards on the East and West Coasts, in the Gulf and on the Great Lakes. The actual man hours per week in 15 representative yards increased from 425,000 in November to 596,000 in February and to 757,000 in March. While these results are due partially to a normal seasonal increase, they are held to indicate also a considerable uptrend in the ship repairing industry, especially as it applies to seagoing vessels.

Shipping Outlook Brighter.

"The brighter outlook for shipping has already been reflected in a decrease in idle tonnage," Smith pointed out. "The tonnage of laid-up vessels decreased some 3,000,000 gross tons during 1933. In the United States, during this period, more than 700,000 tons were taken from lay-up. These vessels were replaced about evenly in the foreign and coastwise trades.

"Panama Canal records also presage an improvement in shipping, especially in the intercoastal trade. The number of transits in 1933 was 13 per cent greater than in 1932, while cargo tonnage increased 16.9 per cent. Transits for March, 1934, were the most impressive in years.

"The improved outlook for vessels in foreign trade is shown by the volume of exports and imports for the first quarter of 1934 as compared with the corresponding period last year. Exports for this year, by value, were 55 per cent greater, while imports had increased 47 per cent.

First Group's Completion.

"The year 1933 marked the completion of the first group of 42 vessels constructed under provisions of the merchant marine act of 1928.

"Merchant shipbuilding in the United States as a result last June declined to four-tenths of 1 per cent of the world total, the lowest percentage on record. The United States stood in ninth place among the 10 maritime nations at the end of the year, although our percentage had increased 7.7 per cent of the world total.

"Merchant vessel contracts let during 1933 included two cargo vessels built for the A. H. Bull Steamship Co.; two large and three small tankers built for the Standard Vacuum Transportation Co.; a small passenger and cargo vessel constructed for the Northland Transportation Co.; and a vessel of special type for the Seaboard Shipping Corporation."

Red Sox Down Nats Twice, 5-4, 7-3

Solters' Homer Wins First; Reynolds Bat Hero in Nightcap.

into the mysteries of big league pitching. Meanwhile, Johnny Welch was holding the Nats to a meager five hits behind some defensive support that not only bordered on but overlapped the sensational.

Carl Reynolds, a Washington alumnus of '32, came back to plague Owner Clark Griffith with four rollicking base hits in the afternoon game, two of them healthy triples, and in the outfield he dissipated Boston fans' fondest memories of the fleet Tom Oliver by robbing the Nats of base hits ticketed for triples.

Among other things, the Nats wasted a 3-0 lead in the afternoon performance, gained when Heinie Manush tripled in the third inning after a walk and Bill Cissell's juggling act had put two men on base. Cronin singled Manush home with the Nats' third run of the inning, which was the last run they were to get off Welch.

Werber Gets Triple.

Bill Werber put the skids under Prim in the second inning when he smashed the rabbit ball for a triple up against the center field fence after Walters and Cissell had singled, and the Sox tied the score in the fourth on Reynolds' triple and Ferrell's double.

Came the fifth and the Nats were rebuffed on the very threshold of two or more runs. Manush had walked and Cronin had singled with one out when Fred Schulte pounded the rabbit ball on a line to deep center field. The groans in Boston throats turned to gasp and then cheers as the ubiquitous Reynolds streaked against the side of the fence, stuck up one talented hand, and pulled down the ball in a catch that was the daddy of 'em all.

Homer for Cissell.

That was the Nats' last threat. Welch gave 'em no more hits in the 4 1-3 innings. But the Sox weren't through. Bill Cissell smacked one of Prim's pitches over the left field fence in the fifth to break the 3-3 tie, and provide the spark of a four-run rally.

Bill Werber followed with a double up against the far-flung center-field fence and there were two on when Prim walked Johnson. Cronin withdrew Prim and sent in Mark Filley for his big-league debut. Filley's first contribution was a wild pitch and his next was a triple that he pitched to the pesky Reynolds which scored two more runs.

Filley then pitched a single to Solters that scored Reynolds and the Sox had their 7-3 lead and the ball game.

Score Tied Again.

Back into a tie the game bounced in the seventh. Berg started the Nats' rally with a walk and, with Pinchhitter Boken out, Myer also walked. Here Cronin substituted Dave Harris for the left-handed hitting Stone, and Dave, who is taking himself seriously these days, larruped Walberg's first pitch into right field for two bases. Thus the score was 4 to 4.

Stewart had set a new 1934 record for Washington pitchers by going six consecutive innings, and Crowder appeared in the box in the seventh. He got by the eighth after Werber again led off with a double. After being sacrificed to third, Werber was out at the plate on Johnson's grounder to Myer.

Dusty Rhodes got the Nats out in order in the eighth and ninth, but Crowder couldn't get by the ninth. The first batter to face him was Solters, and you know what happened.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-mark Applied For)

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

THE SPANISH, in 1540, under Coronado, were the first Europeans to enter Colorado, but their explorations there are misty, not always supported by written records. They found two types of Indians in that region—the peaceful, agricultural cliff dwellers in the southern part and the warlike, nomadic Utes of the north.

More than two centuries later came the French fur traders and with them the first Americans under Zebulon M. Pike in 1806 who discovered the peak which bears his name. Despite these numerous expeditions, Colorado remained virtually an unknown country until the discovery of gold in 1858 by W. G. Russell on the banks of the Platte.

Not quite half of the region was acquired from France in the Louisiana Purchase. The remainder was ceded by Mexico in 1848. It was organized as a territory in 1861 and admitted as a State in 1876, the latter date giving the State the label "The Centennial State."

The name is derived from the greatest river in its bounds, the Colorado. Colorado ranks seventh in size (103,948 square miles); thirty-third in population (1,035,791 in 1930); and thirty-eighth in order of admission.

The State motto is "Nil Sine Numine" (nothing without God), and the State flower is the columbine.

Your Colorado and Mine.

Land of majestic, snowy peaks
Under a golden sun—
Land where each crystal river speaks,
Welcoming everyone.
Land of prairies where short grass grows
That buffalo used to graze;
Of sugar beets in watered rows;
Of cattle, wheat and maize.

This is the land of the clear mirage
Of wealth in mines and fields
Where soul meets soul without camouflage;
And warning friendship yields.
This is the gold of the Golden West
The land of the Columbine
Mecca alike for sports or rest—
Your Colorado and mine.

A Solomon!

State Official Pleases All in Argument.

Charleston, W. Va., April 19 (Spl.).—State Attorney General Homer A. Holt has just achieved the fame of handing down a ruling satisfactory to both sides in a controversy.

It involved issuance of receipts for taxes paid to State officials. The State auditor's office wanted to issue receipts for the taxes. The State treasurer's office contended the receipts were useless; that their issuance represented a waste of time, and that the canceled checks constituted sufficient evidence of payment.

Wherefore the matter was carried to the attorney general and he has just decreed that the auditor's office may issue all the receipts it wishes but that the treasurer's office need not if it doesn't want to.

Walt Mason, Himself

Man of Conscience.

Sir Thomas More was seated within the donjon keep; his cell was badly heated, the grub was stale and cheap. His weary frame was loaded with chains he could not bust, and they were all corroded with red and ancient rust. Upon the wall were written the names of many gents; like him they had been smitten with grievous punishments. To one who'd lived in splendor this was a doleful life, and likely to engender all sorts of hate and strife. And he could shake his fetters, and all that sort of thing, if he'd just write some letters designed to please the king. That monarch badly wanted the aid of Thomas More, and would have been enchanted to open the prison door. "King Henry," said Sir Thomas, "would pull a deed of shame, and so I can not promise to back his little game. Stern conscience is my master, my beacon and my guide, and, though I face disaster, it may not be denied. If deed is right I do it, and feel no moral dread; if wrong, I will eschew it, though I may lose my head." So he kept on refusing the monarch's tout to be, the gloomy prison choosing, when he might well be free. The headsman with his cleaver came to the prison door to end life's fitful fever for good Sir. Thomas More. And still he lives in story, and comes the ages down; his name embalmed in glory, and stars are in his crown. When came the fateful crises that heroes some times see, he made the sacrifices of life and liberty.
